Motor War Coming?
Our Hopeful President
Fast Funerals
Biting Its Own Hand
—By Arthur Brisbane

A big automobile war is coming, apparently.

Ford's program "to make things so cheap that people come and take them away from me" does not suit competitors. The International Harvester Company, which manufactures tractors, and General Motors, owner of the Sampson tractor, in addition to cutting tractor prices, are giving away plows and harrows with the tractor.

Ford's purchase of the Lincoln Company, which produces a very expensive car, is said to mean violent competition in another direction.

Such competition did not seem to be Henry Ford's idea, a few weeks ago when he talked to the writer, mentioning his intention to bid eight million for the Lincoln Company to save Mr. Leland from failure and his workers from idleness. Ford said then, that if it were necessary to help the automobile business generally, he would cut down his own production of cars, in order to compel the purchase of competitive makes.

But some times very friendly beginnings end in a fight.

President Harding, always hopeful, as a good American should be, says of the Washington Conference, "the torches of understanding have been lighted, they ought to glow and encircle the globe."

So they are. But the late Czar of Russia thought the same after he had started the great peace enterprise at the Hague. Where is that Czar now?

You cannot change the characters of wild animals or of men by calling them together. You must change their natures before you can change anything important.

Barnum showed a lion and a lamb living peacefully in the same cage. But he was careful to keep that lion full of meat. And that particular exhibition made no difference to lions and lambs in general.

At French funerals, horses attached to hearses and carriages move always at a very slow walk. Passers-by raise their hats, it is very solemn.

Frenchmen that came to America were amazed to see funerals trotting briskly through the streets, out to the cemetery, and said, "these people live fast, they are even in a hurry to get to the grave."

What would the French say of the Denver chauffeur fined for driving his hearse thirty miles an hour through crowded city streets? The excuse was, "Judge, I had to make two funerals, and I was trying to get to the second on time."

Perhaps if we really knew what happens after death, we should all be in a great hurry to get to the grave, and reach the other side and whatever awaits us there. Perhaps NOT.

In Berlin because of a great strike streets are dark at night, theatres closed, five hundred thousand walk to their work, through snow and slush every day. When the machinery we call civilization breaks down in one place, it breaks down all over—like an automobile.

Dissatisfied workers found no way of solving their problems except by attacking and inconveniencing other workers. The prosperous do not suffer, they ride and eat as usual. One working group on strike makes other groups walk or do without work.

Our combined intelligence has not carried us very far, and labor, enraged, acts like the asylum idiot that bites his own hand.

The ancient American Bible Society, in existence for a hundred years, yields to the high cost of production, and will make Bibles no more. Hereafter it will distribute Bibles, but manufacture Bibles no more.

If fathers and mothers knew the value of the Bible to their children, the American Bible factory would go on.

Regardless of belief, there is no book more important than the Bible, especially to children. The original King James version, not doctored or improved edition, is the best possible education in the English language.

Failure to read the Bible is responsible for much of the abominable English used today.

France celebrates the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of Moliere, her greatest writer except Villon. Echoes of the celebration reach us in the character of Tartuffe in his Malade Imaginaire, in the Precieuses Ridicules, etc. Moliere exposed human hypocrisy, weakness, general foolishness, with extraordinary genius.

He paved the way for others that taught the modern world to think. Such a man could do wonders now. Satire, most powerful weapon, has gone out of use.

A convict put to death is immediately cut open, glands from his body, still palpitating with life, are transplanted in the body of a

LOVE ROW FOLLOWED NEW YEAR PARTY

Victim's Chauffeur Says Slain Director Wept and Sent Back Her Gifts Next Day

Developments in the search today for the murderer of William Desmond Taylor, Los Angeles moving picture director, were:

1—Howard Fellows, Taylor's chauffeur, told of a bitter quarrel between Taylor and Mabel Normand at a party New Year's Eve, which caused the director to break into tears on his return home. The following day Taylor returned some jewelry the actress had given him.

2—Mystery surrounding the whereabouts of letters from Miss Normand to Taylor, missing since the murder, deepened when it was denied at her home that they had been returned to her, as stated by detectives.

3—Discovery that a rival of Taylor for the love of a silver screen star had been seen near the Taylor home just before the murder.

5—Efforts to throttle the investigation of the murder because of the prominence of persons under suspicion were admitted by the police to be hampering their efforts.

6—The time of Taylor's death was definitely established as between 7:45 on the night of the killing, when Miss Normand says she left the director, and 7:55, when the chauffeur, Fellows, failed to obtain any response to a telephone call.

7—The search for Edward F. Sands, former secretary-valet of Taylor, redoubled in intensity when the police discovered that Sands had had business relations with screen actresses.

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—Fresh light was thrown upon the mystery surrounding the murder of William Desmond Taylor, moving picture director, today, when Howard Fellows, formerly employed by the slain man as a chauffeur, told of a violent quarrel between Mabel Normand, movie actress, and the cinema director.

According to the chauffeur the

HEARS HOW ALLEN WAS INDICTED

Judge Fessenden Listens to Attack by Attorney-General on "True Bill"

The hearing on a plea in abatement to quash the indictment for larceny brought by the Suffolk County Grand Jury last November against Attorney-General J. Weston Allen began today in the Suffolk Superior Court, Judge Fessenden is presiding.

The first witness called was Jeremiah A. Desmond of No. 56 Crescent avenue, Dorchester, who was foreman of the Grand Jury which returned the true bill of indictment against Attorney-General Allen.

Desmond testified that the Grand Jury first returned a "no bill" but reversed its action after it had been addressed by District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney F. M. J. Sheehan.

QUOTES PELLETIER.

Desmond indicated feeling ran high in the jury room during the discussion of the case. He testified:

"I asked the district attorney if he did not think the case was petty and he replied:

"'If I ever saw a clear case of larceny, this is one. I have been criticised for not pressing for indictments on cases involving only twenty-four cents and sixty cents.'

"I took the floor to speak and Assistant District Attorney Sheehan came to me and said: 'We want this case reconsidered.'

"I replied: 'You fellows get out of here.'

"The district attorney and his assistants then left the room, and we returned a true bill.

ALLEN IN COURT.

Attorney-General Allen appeared in the courtroom with his counsel, Herbert Parker of Clinton, and Assistant Attorneys-General Hurwitz, Goldberg, Abbot and Flaherty. At the opening of the case the attorney-general withdrew his plea of not guilty, which he had entered with reservations, he said.

Former Attorney-General Parker then rose and read a plea in abate-

OFFERS JOB TO JOHN A. SULLIVAN

Former Corporation Counsel Rejects Mayor Curley's Tender to Be City's Law Head

Mayor James M. Curley announced today:

That the office of corporation counsel, paying $9,000, had been offered to John A. Sullivan, former chairman of the Finance Commission.

That Sullivan declined the appointment and the place was then offered to E. Mark Sullivan, Boston lawyer, who is considering it.

That the office of fire commissioner, John R. Murphy's old job, had been offered to Congressman Peter F. Tague, who is considering it.

Mayor Curley's letter of regret to John A. Sullivan read:

"I am in receipt this day of your letter declining the appointment tendered you by me of corporation counsel for the city of Boston.

"I regret exceedingly that circumstances will neither permit of your acceptance or reconsideration of your decision, as there are few men in Massachusetts as eminently equipped as you are to discharge the duties of corporation counsel, and to wage a fight for a lower street car fare.

"The tender of assistance, without recompense, upon legislation affecting Boston, pending at the State House, is gladly accepted."

The announcement that Mayor Curley had offered a job to Sullivan created surprise at City Hall.

Sullivan was corporation counsel in the first Curley administration.

Curley removed him from office during the progress of a hearing before the Finance Commission on the city boulevard cases.

"Sullivan had brains," said Mayor Curley today, "no matter what his political affiliations may be."

100 p. c. a Month for Loans in "Lenders' Paradise"

By Associated Press

Moscow, Feb. 8.—One hundred per cent. a month is the average interest charged in Moscow, which has become a money lenders' paradise.

Seven trillion or more rubles have been printed, but there is not enough money in circulation to accommodate the demands of business and speculation. Virtually everybody lives by speculation and thousands clamor daily for loans of from 20,000,000 to 200,000,000 rubles each.

Borrowers can triple this money by journeying to distant points, like Kiev, or Tashkent, where food is cheap, and bringing back a few hundred pounds of flour, honey of potatoes.

BREECHES BUOY SAVES 12 MEN ON SHIP

Highland Light, Feb. 8.—Twelve of the half-frozen crew of the freighter Thlatemore, lying jammed in Cape Cod Bands, had been rescued with a breeches buoy late today.

Life-savers continued to battle in the teeth of an icy gale to take off the remaining thirty-four men of the crew.

A merciless sea is pounding the craft.

Seams are spreading, and she is reported leaking.

Late this afternoon the sea showed no tendency to abate its fury and the wind whistled with cruel fierceness, making the work of the life-saving crews extremely hazardous.

There was constant danger that the freighter would break in two under

CONSTABLE DEAD, MANY WOUNDED

Score of Armed Kidnapers Arrested; Northern Ireland Aroused

London, Feb. 8.—The Evening News estimates the number of kidnaped persons in Ulster at 100; the Central News estimates 60. Four policemen were shot at Rollea. A constable was killed at Clones.

Belfast, Feb. 8 (By the Associated Press).—Armed bands raided several of the northern counties of Ireland last night and early today, carrying out kidnapings of prominent Unionists and ambushing Ulster special constables on an extensive scale.

The Ulster government immediately mobilized in Belfast hundreds of Ulster specials and dispatched them in lorries to the scenes of the kidnapings where they are now in search of the perpetrators.

Up to this afternoon the capture and spiriting away of at least twenty constables had been reported. Several raiders were wounded and nearly a score of arrests made.

SEVERAL WOUNDED.

The counties where the raids occurred were Fermanagh, Tyrone, Donegal and Sligo. In several cases Unionists who resisted were wounded. One constable was shot and killed.

About twenty "B" specials and the sons of some Unionist farmers were kidnaped and spirited away, as well as a lorry load of "A" specials with arms and ammunition.

The raiders accidentally met a lorry and called upon its occupants to halt. In a gun fight one of the specials was wounded. Another party of raiders, just outside the Clones, met a second lorry load of "A" specials, who refused to halt. The raiders opened fire, wounding a number of the specials and killing one of them.

New York, Feb. 8.—Evelyn Nesbit, one time wife of Harry Thaw, had a lively celebration—nothing less than "her own wake"—with a party of friends, at No. 227 West Fifty-second street.

Dispatches from Washington gave Broadway a shock by saying the body of a woman, apparently Miss Nesbit, had been found floating in the Potomac a few miles away from the capital.

Said Miss Nesbit: "If I ever do commit suicide I'll pull off something spectacular. No cheap drowning for me."

O'Day, mother of two World War veterans, whose troubles since her eviction from an apartment at No. 134 Lowell street, Somerville, in October, have excited wide comment, is in the Boston City Hospital. PAY COAL CHARGE ON WATER POWER

Edison Expert Admits Public Is Assessed 11 Cents for Current Bought From State

The State of Massachusetts sells water power to the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston at 6¼ mills per kilowat hour and the Edison Company turn around and sells it back to the State in the form of electricity at 11 cents per kilowat hour.

This information was brought out today by Attorney Grenville S. MacFarland, counsel for the Boston American, during his examination of Louis R. Wallis, sales superintendent of the Edison Company at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

The hearing was on petition of the Boston American and city of Boston to bring about a reduction in the price of electricity.

Another fact revealed by Mr. MacFarland's questioning of Wallis was that the Edison Company made a super-charge under the "coal clause" on several million kilowat hours of power purchased from the State and New England Power Company.

The power in question was produced by water, the witness admitted. He added that this practice ended last May.

PAY FOR COAL.

In other words, he admitted, the company charged customers extra sums on the ground that it was compelled to pay high prices for coal to produce the power in question.

Airplane With Ski Runners Finishes Trip Over Snow

By Associated Press.

Cochrane, Ont., Feb. 8.—Captain Maxwell, flying an airplane equipped with runners in place of wheels for the "take off," has just completed a successful trip from this northern rail outpost to Moose Factory, on the south shore of Hudson bay, and return.

Captain Maxwell was accompanied by a pilot and carried mail and supplies.

On the return trip three landings were made on the Abitibi River to test the machine on different kinds of snow. The ski attachments, Captain Maxwell reported, were found to be practical, his ship landing and taking off with the ease of a flying boat on open water.

Bushmen doubted the ability of the machine to rise in "sugar snow," but the fliers had no difficulties.

BANK CASHIER IN WINCHESTER DISCHARGED

Let Out by National Institution After Examiners Make an Investigation

Officials of the Winchester National Bank today endeavored to prevent a run on their institution by stopping rumors circulated since Saturday, that the bank was in trouble.

The rumors followed the discharge of Cashier Edward B. Grosvenor. He had been cashier for more than a year.

Bank examiners suddenly called in last week were busy examining the bank's books for several days. They completed their labors on Friday. That day Grosvenor was discharged.

"Discovery of irregular transactions, not involving money, caused us to discontinue his services," Vice-President Sanderson said today.

"Rumors that the bank is in difficulty," he continued, "are erroneous. We stand ready to meet all of our financial obligations."

Arthur E. Tuteln, president of the bank, was said to be in Providence today

Heiress Married to Mechanic Returns From Honeymoon

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Anastase Andrevitch Vonsiatsky-Vonsiatsky, who were married in New York last Friday night, arrived in their cottage home in Ridley Park today. Neither Mrs. Vonsiatsky, who was Mrs. Marion B. Stephens, Chicago heiress, nor her young husband, Baldwin Locomotive Works employe, would talk to interviewers, but both seemed extremely happy.

They were observed at the West Philadelphia station and took a train to their home when they could not agree with a taxicab driver on the fare to Ridley Park. Their identity became quickly known on the train, and they moved from one car to another to avoid annoyance. Mr. and Mrs. Vonsiatsky went to Canada after their marriage.

MRS. DICKERMAN LIKE HYPNOTIST, SAYS WOMAN

Mother of Young Husband Also Says He Declared He Was Vamped

"Mrs. Eugenie Young Dickerman appeared to me like a hypnotist at a dinner which I gave to her and my son, Robert, following their marriage," Mrs. Minnie L. Dickerman of Somerville testified today in the suit for $160,000 for alienation of affections which her daughter-in-law has brought against her and which is before a jury in the East Cambridge Superior Court.

"My son appeared as though his mind was wandering," the witness continued. "Previously he had said to me: 'My wife vamped me.' I regarded her as an adventuress—that is a person who has a peculiar influence over others."

Mrs. Minnie L. Dickerman, the mother, resumed the witness stand and was questioned by her attorney, Elridge R. Anderson. The witness said she told her son, when he informed her of his marriage: "I am shocked to think you should marry a woman of that age. You have been living stock of every one. I beg you to keep it secret."

"DELUGE" OF LETTERS.

The plaintiff, witness said, had "deluged" her with letters. Her son later told her, she said, that he no longer loved his wife. Mrs. Dickerman declared she did not tell her husband or her mother about the marriage, fearing the shock would kill them.

The courtroom was again thronged with women and many were outside, eagerly seeking admission.

The appearance of two mysterious witnesses from New York was eagerly awaited.

The defendant was questioned by her counsel, Attorney Anderson:

Q.—When did your son come home from the service? A.—March, 1919.

Q.—When did Robert first talk of Mrs. Young? A.—Soon after he arrived at home.

Q.—Did he make any request to you in regard to Mrs. Young at that time? A.—Yes.

Q.—What? A.—That I invite her to dinner.

Q.—Did she come? A.—Yes.

Q.—After that have you knowledge of any affection Robert had for Mrs. Young? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long after Robert came home did you find out he was married? A.—A short time.

Q.—How did you learn about the marriage? A.—My son said, "I'm married." I said, "To whom?" He said, "To Mrs. Young."

MOTHER WAS "SHOCKED."

Q.—What did you say? A.—I said, "Robert, I'm shocked to think you should get married to a woman of that age when you are only starting on your career. You are not making much money. You will be the laughing-stock of everyone. Robert, I beg of you to keep this a secret."

Q.—When was the next time Robert spoke of his marriage? A.—April 19, 1920.

Q.—What was said? A.—Robert spoke of a house in New York where the antiques were.

Q.—When was the next conversation? A.—The last part of June, 1920.

Q.—What did Robert say then? A.—He said, "I realize more and more I have made a great mistake. The truth is, she vamped me. I have written her a letter telling her I am going to push for a divorce. I said, "Robert, you have no grounds for a divorce."

Q.—Did you ever receive communications from the plaintiff? A.—I was deluged with mail from her.

"I DO NOT LOVE MY WIFE."

Q.—Who was present at Long John Island, Me., in July, 1920? A.—Myself and Robert.

Q.—What did he tell you? A.—He said I had driven him to the stage where he must consider consulting a lawyer. He said his lawyer said that I (Mrs. Dickerman) should not answer letters written by Mrs. Young. I said, "Robert, you must make up your own mind whether you will live with Mrs. Young." He said, "I can't live with her."

Q.—What was the next conversation? A.—He said, "I do not love my wife." I said, "Even though you do not love her, you must support her." He said, "Will you accept that." I said, "She may have you, but she won't have me."

Q.—At any time did you advise him to leave the plaintiff? A.—Never!

Q.—Did you attempt at any time to separate the two? A.—Never. I felt I should never be guilty of separating two lovers.

Q.—At the time you learned of the marriage, did you show any ill-will toward Mrs. Young? A.—I showed no ill-will, and I was decidedly overcome.

Q.—Why did you keep the secret of the marriage from your husband and Robert's grandmother? A.—Because I was afraid the shock would kill my mother and wished to keep it from Robert's father for the same reason.

Q.—Did you ever call Mrs. Dickerman an adventurer? A.—Yes.

DIRECTOR WEPT AT PARTING

Fellows could hear them quarreling, but could not distinguish the nature of the trouble between them.

On reaching home, after taking the actress to her abode, Taylor broke down and wept bitterly, says the chauffeur. The next day the director made up a parcel of jewelry sent him by Miss Normand and returned it to her.

Henry Peavey, Taylor's colored valet, confirmed this story of Fellows.

CARESSED HER OFTEN.

Both Peavey and Fellows declared that Taylor and Miss Normand were most affectionate.

"He used to caress her frequently," declared the valet.

Fellows, in his story told to the police today, said he had left the Taylor home at 4:30 the afternoon before the shooting, with instructions to telephone at 7:30. He called at 7:55, and there was no response.

He then went to the home, reaching there at 8:15. There was a light burning down stairs, but though he rang the front door bell repeatedly, he got no answer. So he put up the car and went home.

In her story of the events of that night Miss Normand told the police she left the Taylor house between 7:30 and 7:45 ,walked to the curb with Taylor and entered her car.

7:50 TO 7:55.

This is taken to indicate that the murder must have been committed between 7:30 and 7:55.

The police while devoting much of their time today to tearing away the veil of secrecy that shrouded the relations existing between the slain man and a number of beautiful film stars, also today centered their activity in an effort to arrest Edward E. Sands, former secretary-valet to Taylor.

It was adm tted that fresh evidence showing that Sands had business relations with two or three actresses was responsible for this renewal of activity.

A soiled handkerchief bearing the initial "S" was found near Taylor's body last Thursday morning, according to a statement from detectives today. Police believe the handkerchief was dropped by the murderer, either before the fatal shot was fired or during the assassin's hasty exit from the house.

LETTERS GONE.

A new mystifying fact was thrown into the case when detectives reported that the letters written by Mabel Normand to Taylor had been returned to the actress after being missing for several days. Report was made to the police the day after the director's body was found that a bundle of letters penned by the murdered man by the popular star had mysteriously disappeared from the Taylor home.

While Miss Normand protested to officers that there was nothing of importance in the missives the police were eager to obtain the letters and to solve the mystery of their disappearance from the home of the murdered man.

At the Normand residence today denial was made by representatives of the actress that the letters had been returned. The actress was still reported prostrated following her collapse yesterday from excitement at the funeral of the slain director.

While investigators report that certain interests in the motion picture colony are bringing pressure to bear in an attempt to throttle a thorough investigation of the case, authorities are assuming the authorities are every way possible to run down the murderer, regardless of the prominent personages in the cinema world who may be dragged into the limelight.

The time at which Taylor was murdered was more definitely fixed today when detective closely interrogated Howard Fellows, the slain man's chauffeur. He told officers that he called his employer's home by telephone at 7:55 p. m. the night of the murder and received no response.

He then drove to the Alvarado street bungalow arriving at 8:15. He said he rang the doorbell several times but received no reply, despite the fact that he could see a light burning inside.

SEEN BY MRS. MacLEAN.

Fellows said he assumed Taylor had a visitor and did not wish to be disturbed. He told officers he felt confident he was the man Mrs. Douglas MacLean, wife of the screen actor who occupies the bungalow adjoining the Taylor home, said she saw leaving the director's house the night of the murder.

"After calling the house with no response," Fellows said to the police, "I drove directly to Mr. Taylor's. I was surprised to see a light burning inside after I had been unable to reach Taylor by telephone. It was about 8:15 when I arrived. I rang the doorbell, three or four times. I decided he must have someone with him and went away to put up the car.

"I have no doubt I am the man Mrs. MacLean saw leaving the Taylor home. I did not notice anything that aroused my suspicions. I saw no cars or persons in the immediate vicinity."

Miss Normand, who was with Taylor shortly before he was shot, if the time of the shooting as fixed by police is correct, told officers she left the house between 7:30 and 7:45. She stated that the director walked with her to the car, leaving his front door open, as was his custom.

WAS PREMEDITATED.

While the two were standing at the curb Taylor's colored servant, Henry Peavey, closed the front door of the house and left, walking past the couple at the car. At this moment, he police believe, the Taylor home was unoccupied. The door had been left open and the slayer slipped inside to a place of hiding.

The police believe the slaying was coldly premeditated and that the director was shot down without a chance to defend himself. The officers understand a theory that the crime was committed by a hired assassin or person inspired by a spirit of revenge.

Mary Miles Minter's Love for Director Taylor Budded in Greenwich Village

Charming pose of Mary Miles Minter, whose home in Los Angeles is being guarded against curiosity seekers, following the mysterious assassination of William D. Taylor. A letter on her monogrammed stationery, found in Taylor's home, says: "I love you."

"I did love William Taylor," Miss Minter said after the letter had been found. "I loved him deeply and tenderly, with all the admiration and respect a young girl gives to a man with his poise and unfailing culture."

TAYLOR PLAYED DANGEROUS LOVE GAMES

By ARTHUR B. REEVE,
Creator of "Craig Kennedy" Scientific Detective Stories.
Written Expressly for Universal Service.

(Copyright, 1922, by Universal Service)

New York, Feb. 8.—Another of those fascinating sex mystery cases—this Taylor-Tanner case!

It is just a week today since William Desmond Taylor was shot in his Hollywood bungalow.

So far no one has unmeshed the mystery. Instead it a further snarled. Will it be like the famous Elwell case and remain a mystery?

Taylor, like Elwell, was playing the most dangerous of all the new criminal games—the woman game.

Of course, the first thing a scientific detective, like Craig Kennedy, would do would be to reconstruct the case as it is at present, in the absence of the full facts; endeavor to motivate it.

First, suicide? That we can negative pretty confidently — with a lot more confidence than in the case of Joseph B. Elwell.

Second—Did a woman shoot Taylor? We shall see. Perhaps. At least a woman can throw light on it.

It wasn't many hours when the finger print expert was on the job with his aluminum dust and high power lens. Photographs of finger prints and palm prints were found all over the furniture by these experts.

Few of them were evidently the prints of men. Most of them were the daintier prints of women—and not of the same woman. These girls left their "signatures" just as on a visitor's book.

Much stress has been laid by the detectives on the "Blessed Baby" letters of Mabel Normand to her intimate friend, the dead director, who had the interest, the jealousy perhaps, to try to get them more than a week before? Who took the risk to get them after the tragedy, when they were first missed?

Third, was Taylor struck down by a man?

Has the long arm of the past reached forth and stricken him down? Why did his brother disappear now? Is there some skeleton in the closet of the family? This would indeed be romantic. It has been rumored that the brother, Dennis Deane-Tanner, is also in pictures under an assumed name. Certain it is that the brother's wife received remittances now and then.

Just to keep the record of possibilities, what about the hidden years in Alaska and elsewhere?

His Courtesy to Her in Short Skirts and Curls Aroused First Interest of Girl Star

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—The full details of the love romance of William Desmond Taylor, the slain motion picture director, and the beautiful Mary Miles Minter, thirty years or more his junior, whose home is surrounded by detectives today in connection with the mystery, is told today for the first time.

It was at Santa Barbara two years ago that William Desmond Taylor and Mary Miles Minter met. He was her director and it was her first venture in an important role in motion pictures. She was very young but she had the yearnings of a young girl to be treated as a "grownup."

The unfailing courtesy which Taylor always accorded all members of his company awakened the keen interest of his young star. Here was a man who treated her as a woman, who showed her the deference not usually accorded to short skirts and curls.

After completing the picture the company was taken to New York. It was there in a little inn in Greenwich Village that Mary first realized her love for the grave director.

New their romance is being made an open book. The social and professional engagements of the actress and Taylor are being carefully scrutinized.

While not pointing to a direct solution of the mysterious killing, love letters found in Taylor's study furnish a thrilling feature in the case.

The love of Miss Minter spoke from a scented note written on the butterfly monogrammed stationery of the noted actress which was found in the effects of the slain man. The note read:

"Dearest:

"I love you—I love you—I love you. XXXXXXX-X-X-S!

"Mary."

When informed by detectives that this note had been found, the beautiful young film favorite at once admitted having sent it, and then passionately expressed her love for William Desmond Taylor.

"I did love William Taylor," she declared. "I loved him deeply and tenderly, with all the admiration and respect a young girl gives to a man with his poise and unfailing culture."

BREECHES BUOY SAVES SAILORS IN WRECK

the tremendous pounding of the giant waves that continually broke over her.

Crews from the Pealed Hill Bars and the Race Point Life Saving Station made several vain attempts to launch their surf boats. Breakers driven in by the northeast gale made it impossible for their small craft to live in the boiling waters.

Far off shore, the coast guard cutter Tampa rode out the gale. It was impossible for her to come in shore until the gale abated. Summoned by wireless, the cutter stood by, waiting the first opportunity to come to the rescue of Captain Fortune and his men.

Coast guards did not succeed in landing a line aboard the Thistlemore from their breeches buoy rigging until low tide.

A grim cheer shot up when the line was landed and made fast and the first man hauled to shore.

During a thick snow storm the Thistlemore ran onto the bar, which is known among mariners as "the worst graveyard of the Atlantic." The plight of the big ship was discovered by the patrol of the Peaked Hill station and the crew of the Race Point station of the Coast Guard.

The wind howled about the ship and high seas smashed over her. The distance from shore and the heavy sea made it impossible to reach her with a lifeboat.

She was en route from Liverpool and Boston to Baltimore when she grounded. She is 420 feet long, has a net tonnage of 4,146 and is an oil burner. The Thistlemore was one of the Johnson Line steamships bought by the Furness, Withy & Company.

Shortly after striking, Captain Fortune sent up rockets. The coast guard crews launched their heavy motor boats but were forced to give up attempts to reach the Thistlemore because of the rough seas.

TAYLOR'S VISIT WITH BLONDE RECALLED

Registered as R. P. Townsend, Jr., and Wife, Former Adirondack Hotel Man Says

New York, Feb. 8.—Details of the visit that William Cunningham Deane-Tanner made with a woman to the Hotel Childwold, in the Adirondacks, were told by John Gleason. At that time he was captain of bellboys in the hostelry.

He is now connected with a local hotel. Mrs. Tanner made this trip the basis of her suit for divorce.

Gleason said:

CAME WITH WOMAN.

"One day in July (it must have been about July 9, 1908, a tall, distinguished gentleman in early middle life, sort of blond, with a close-cropped mustache, appeared at the hotel.

"With him was a well-set-up blonde woman, somewhat younger than himself. Both were beautifully dressed. They seemed to be man and wife, had lots of baggage and seemed to be typical persons of means travelling through the Adirondacks for rest and recreation.

"The man registered 'R. P. Townsend, Jr., and wife, New York,' and for six days the couple remained in the cottage. They had their meals served to the cottage and, as I recall, seldom came to the main house. They loafed on the porch or took long walks towards Tupper Lake, etc.

"'Mr. Townsend' had notified us, as I recall, that he and 'Mrs. Townsend' were leaving next morning on the 7 o'clock train. So I was deputed to go to their cottage and collect the amount due. It was less than $150, as I recall.

"The cottage was about 200 yards away. It was dark—about 9 o'clock. I walked down the narrow, wooded path and knocked at the door. 'Mr. and Mrs. Townsend' were in the big samp room downstairs. I wished him good evening and presented the bill. He examined the items and then said:

"'By Jove, I've only $70.'

"Then he walked over and willspered to his 'wife.' She wore jewels worth thousands, or so it seemed to me, but she said she had no ready money, either. Then 'Mr. Townsend' offered me a check signed 'W. C. Deane-Tanner,' which he said would be honored.

"I was certain then that his name really was Deane-Tanner, but I didn't wish to take the check. I told him so.

"Thereupon he pulled a beautiful diamond ring from his finger and told me the hotel could keep the jewel as indemnity until he sent them the money. I said this would be satisfactory, took the ring and left him.

"Next morning he and 'Mrs. Townsend' left. I never saw them since and never heard of them again until I was asked to identify a photograph of W. C. Deane-Tanner as 'Townsend.' This, of course, I was able to do. Later I testified in court."

Woman Wanted to Flee to Hills With Taylor

By International News Service

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—Another code love-letter, found in the effects of William Desmond Taylor, was published today. The name of the woman who wrote it was not attached to the missive. The letter said:

"What shall I call you, you wonderful man? I want to go away with you up in the hills or anywhere just so we'd be alone, in a beautiful little woodland lodge.

"I'd sweep and dust (they make the sweetest little dust-caps you know), and tie fresh ribbons on the snowy white curtains and feed the birds and fix the flowers, and, oh, yes, set the table and help you wash the dishes, and then I'd darn your socks."

TWO MORE GIRLS ARE SOUGHT IN TAYLOR CASE

Tells of Taking Mysterious Quartet to House Near Slain Director's

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—Six headquarters men spent more than two hours receiving details of a story from C. M. Meister, a chauffeur for the Yellow Taxicab Company, which they believe to be of the greatest significance in the Taylor murder case.

Meister was brought to police headquarters by the assistant general manager of the company. His narrative in substance follows:

"On last Wednesday night at 10:55 o'clock I picked up four passengers at No. 682 South Broadway—two men and two women.

"Upon entering the cab one of the men pulled up the window between them and me, apparently so that I might not overhear their conversation. I drove them to a number in the Wilshire district.

"One of the men and the two women left the cab and went into the apartment house.

"The other man remained in the cab and asked me to drive him to the Ambassador Hotel. I did so. He was in the hotel about fifteen minutes. He came out carrying a leather brief case.

"His order to me was: 'Drive me to No. 400 Alvarado street.' At least that was the number I caught. There was a '400' in it but I am not sure whether it was the even number.

(Taylor lived at No. 404-B South Alvarado street.)

"I said to him: 'Don't you mean 400 — street, naming it.' 'Sure,' he replied, 'I made a mistake.'

"When we reached the address a man came running from the side of the house. He was the man I had previously let out there with the two women. The man in the cab got out and the other fellow stepped in. 'Drive me around,' he said, 'just keep going around the block.'

"I drove him around the block several times, then drew up near the apartment house. There was a car—a roadster—in front. When he saw this he became much excited. 'Don't let them see me,' he said, 'drive me around again.'

"I was coming back again someone was lighting the lights of the roadster and as we drew up alongside the car I took a look and saw that the passenger gave an exclamation of alarm, got out of the door of the car and pulled down the curtain on the side towards the roadster.

"What strikes the police with greatest force in the chauffeur's story is that the man who figured in the mysterious attempt at concealment wore a muffler around his neck. It was a man in a muffler whom Mrs. Douglas MacLean says she saw leaving Taylor's house the night of the murder.

The only apparent discrepancy is as to the time the shot was fired. The police, however, are said to have left and her three children today were burned to death when fire destroyed their home in the East End.

MISS MINTER REMAINS IN SECLUSION

Denies Herself to All Callers and Refuses to Make Any Statements

Los Angeles, Feb. 8 (By International News Service).—Sheltered from public gaze behind a barrier of servants and close friends of the family, Mary Miles Minter, sometimes known as the "Darling of the Movies," whose name has been frequently mentioned in connection with the death of William Desmond Taylor because of the admiration she is said to have expressed for him, still remained in seclusion at her Hollywood home today.

Miss Minter did not see newspaper men who visited her home, neither did her mother nor her personal attorney.

At the door was a man said to have been formerly active as a detective. He was polite, but he let the correspondents know they would not be permitted to pass over the threshold.

A friend of the family explained that "Miss Minter is not making statements regarding letters or anything else."

U. S. NAVY TO BE SLASHED ALL ALONG LINE

It's About Twice as Big as Necessary, Declare G. O. P. Leaders

(Copyright, 1922, By International News Service.)

Washington, Feb. 8.—The American navy is in for the greatest cutting it has ever experienced at the hands of Congress—a slashing that will carry it far below the mark set by the armament conference.

Republican leaders in Congress, those who handle the money bags, informed the International News Service today that the American navy is just about twice as big as is necessary under existing conditions and that before Congress finishes up its work this session the navy will be reduced by approximately one-half all along the line —appropriations, personnel, both enlisted and commissioned men, ships, shore stations, and other factors that go to make up the navy of today.

"The big navies of the world are now limited," they said. "We have declared a building holiday with our chief competitors. We are told that the peace of the world has been insured for fifteen years at least by the armament conference. Then why do we need a big navy? Besides, we have an economy program to put through and we need the money."

The first touch of the knife will be felt in the appropriations for the upkeep of the navy for the next fiscal year, starting June 30 next. The estimates will be cut from the latest $323,000,000, congressional leaders said today, leaving but slightly over $200,000,000 to run the American navy from June 30, 1922, to June 30, 1923.

In the original estimate was $90,000,000 for the completion of the 1926 building program. This will be knocked out completely, as under the naval treaty with Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan the program is not to be completed. In the original estimate was $145,154,191 for the pay and subsistence of the navy. They plan to cut this in half by the simple expedient of reducing the personnel by half.

The present authorized strength of the navy is approximately 166,000 men and 5,456 officers. Before the House gets through with its present plans the authorized strength will be not more than 69,000 men and 3,000 officers, leaders said today.

AGENTS SHADOWED AND RAIDS TIPPED OFF, WILSON CHARGES

Harold D. Wilson, Federal prohibition enforcement director for Massachusetts, who was deposed following his sensational raid at the Quincy House during a G. O. P. dinner, has written a series of articles exclusively for the Boston American, describing the events that led up to his discharge. The third of the series follows:

By HAROLD D. WILSON.

CHAPTER III.

Inability to collect legitimate expenses was one of the serious handicaps and today I am out of pocket several hundred dollars as a reward for my enforcement activities. Most days were working from fifteen to twenty hours a day, some of the time on Sundays as well as week-days, found it impossible to collect the money actually expended on expenses.

The following letter is submitted as proof of my losses during one month. Although I have appealed directly to Washington on a number of occasions, I am still out of pocket the eighty-nine odd dollars mentioned in this letter.

November 7, 1921.

"Dear Mr. Potter:

"Your attention is invited to attached memorandum, which gives in detail the amounts disallowed on my pay voucher for September.

"In further explanation, I am willing to state under oath that on September 7, 1921, I contracted with Mr. James J. Clancy, 13A Sheridan avenue, Medford, Mass., for the use of his touring car for a four-day trip through Western Massachusetts, in which some 750 miles were covered. I agreed to pay Mr. Clancy $35 a day, regardless of mileage, or $140 for the entire trip. On September 7 and 8 I was accompanied by Mr. Clancy and the charge of $35 per diem was apportioned between us; that is, $17.50 each.

Lodgings While On Raid Disallowed

"On September 9 and 10 I was accompanied by three agents, and the charge of $35 per diem was apportioned between four, or $8.75 each. The automobile hire for September 8, 9 and 10 was approved, but the charge of $17.50 for September 7 was disallowed. I respectfully suggest that since three days of the automobile trip was approved, certainly the day in which the major part of the journey was accomplished should also be approved.

"September 20, 1921, I was in charge of a raiding party in Worcester and Quincy. I did not accomplish my official duties until 2 a. m. September 21, and 6 a. m. September 21, I left with the same raiding party for Millis, Medway and adjacent towns. I completed my day's work at Medway at about 1 a. m. September 22. On the morning of September 23 I continued the same raiding party, leading no less than eight or ten raids, and continued my day's work long after midnight September 23.

Although it would have been a physical impossibility for me to have returned to my post of duty, Boston, on any of these occasions, and although it would have cost the department more in car fares on auto hire to have returned to Boston and then back to the field in which I was working, my lodging of September 21, $1.50, supported by voucher No. 8, was disallowed, and my lodging and breakfast on September 23, $1 and $1.25, respectively, were disallowed, and my lodging on September 22, $1 was also disallowed.

Worked Fifteen to Twenty Hours a Day

"On the following dates the items set out below were disallowed:

Sept. 22, auto hire $3.57.
Sept. 23, auto hire $17.50, vou. No. 12
Sept. 24, auto hire $11.67, vou. No. 13
Sept. 25, auto hire $11.67, vou. No. 14
Sept. 28, auto hire $11.67, vou. No. 17

"On these dates I was in charge of raiding parties and an automobile was the only means of travel that could have been used. Attention is invited to the tremendous amount of ground covered during those five days and the number of raids and court cases handled. Neither I nor any member of the party. I am willing to testify under oath, which I can back up with affidavits if necessary, from the officials of towns in which I worked, worked less than fifteen to twenty hours a day on each of these dates.

"On September 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29, lodging $1 and breakfast in some instances, was disallowed on the ground that I was within one hour's journey of my post of duty at the close of my day's work. On each one of these days it was in the vicinity of midnight before I ceased raiding, and it was necessary to appear in court the next morning in the same locality, making it a physical impossibility to have returned to my post of duty and still be in court at the proper time. Furthermore, it would have cost the government more in auto hire than my modest lodging of $1 and approximately the same amount for breakfast.

Handicap By Lack of Help

"I respectfully request that I be immediately reimbursed for the $89.08 of the $89.43 deducted from my September voucher, the deduction of 10c. on September 12, and 25c on September 24 for excessive payment for supper and dinner respectively, being a proper, even if not unfortunate, deduction.

"Thanking you in advance for anything that you may do to expedite this payment, I am,

"Very truly yours,

"HAROLD D. WILSON."

My efforts to obtain a clean and trustworthy force resulted in a constant shrinkage in the number of agents for law enforcement. The Massachusetts quota of agents during my connection with the department was 35. In July when I took up the law enforcement end I was forced to have twenty-six agents and the director three.

After the first few skirmishes following my house-cleaning I never had more than twenty agents and generally considerably less. At the time I severed my connections with the department I had twenty agents instead of twenty-six, while the director had some fifteen instead of the nine originally agreed upon.

A few of the difficulties constantly confronting my department were:

FIRST—Constant shadowing of new agents and tipping off to the liquor interests of the men identified with my force.

SECOND—Constant leaks as to raids by some of the old men.

Accused of Spreading Bigotry

THIRD—Constant propaganda by the same individuals as to what I was to be discharged, in an endeavor to break down the morale of my force.

FOURTH—Constant spreading by the same gentlemen as to my narrow-minded, religious bigotry. I have been to city after city where I have found it necessary to live down every conceivable kind of slander, some of the best citizens telling me afterwards that they did not even want to look at the face of such a disreputable bigot and cut-throat as I had been pictured.

FIFTH — Inability to collect legitimate expenses.

SIXTH — Constant loafing around the Federal Court Building and on the streets, by agents not under my control, which my men were literally working night and day.

SEVENTH—Publicity by the director's office in fields secretly worked up for raids by my men just prior to the execution of said raids. This publicity is not attributed to malice, but rather to lack of co-operation. Complaints coming from the sections in which my men were working under cover to the effect that no agents were active in that particular section, brought publicity to the effect that men would be assigned to that territory forthwith, resulting in an immediate clamping on of the lid by those my men were about to raid.

MYSTERY VEILS GARLAND TRIP TO PHILADELPHIA

Friends Wonder If Wife and "Twin Soul" Lillian Conrad Met in Quaker City

What was the cause of the unexpected and mysterious visit of Charles A. Garland and his wife, from whom he had been called estranged, to Philadelphia?

Did the North Carver millionaire idealist and reputed advocate of "free love" take his pretty little wife to Philadelphia to see Lillian Conrad, Garland's "twin soul," in order to bring about a reconciliation?

Were Garland and his wife called to Philadelphia by the father of Lillian Conrad to explain some of the peculiar conditions that Garland has admitted existed down at the little "free love" farm at North Carver? Did Garland and his wife go to the Quaker City to make a settlement with the girl?

RESULT OF PARLEY.

These are some of the questions being asked today by friends of the Garlands, shocked because of the treatment that the young millionaire and his wife received in Philadelphia, where they were hooted and jeered.

Friends of Mrs. Charles A. Garland stated today they believed the mysterious visit to Philadelphia grew out of the conference. But whether a reconciliation was effected at that time or not is another question that friends are trying to solve.

Like a bolt from a clear sky young Garland and his wife suddenly and unexpectedly arrived in Philadelphia, the home of the young millionaire's "twin soul," Lillian Conrad.

A smile lit up the little woman's face as she and her husband stepped into the street and started in the direction of the Reading Terminal. The smile soon turned to a look of absolute fear as the crowd recognized her husband by his peculiar garb and started to follow, its size increasing with every block.

MRS. GARLAND IN TEARS.

On Broad street, said the dispatches, the crowd grew larger. Shop girls, stenographers, clerks, business men, messenger boys and shoppers all pushed and jostled their way to get the young "idealist" and his frightened little wife.

Long before Garland and his wife had reached the Reading Terminal the little pale faced, blonde haired woman was weeping bitterly.

As Mrs. Garland sat alone in the big waiting room tears again welled up in her eyes. She was apparently afraid and was extremely nervous. A big policeman saw her sitting alone facing the stares of the curious and went over and sat down beside her for a few moments. Then he escorted her to a parlor car of the New York train. But Garland on his return took her by the arm and led her from the parlor car to the day coach. He had not bought Pullman tickets.

He was recently released after serving a term in a worthless check case.

And Round Out Face And Figure If You Are Weak, Thin, Or Emaciated Due To Causes Explained Below

Get a FREE $1.00 Package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets Today as Explained Below—Try Them for Ten Days and Watch the Results

Science has at last shown how we sometimes grow weak, thin, and emaciated on an abundance of food (lacking in vitamines) while with a much smaller amount of food, rich in vitamines, we may quickly take on good firm flesh, increase in weight, and make a remarkable gain in strength, energy and endurance, provided your blood contains sufficient quantity of oxygenated organic iron to enable your body to assimilate your food properly.

Without organic iron both food and vitamines are ineffective, useless as your body cannot change lifeless inert food matter into living cells and tissue unless you have plenty of organic iron in your blood.

For centuries scientists tried in vain to make organic iron. At last the problem was solved so that you may now obtain organic iron from the iron in your blood from any druggist under the name of "Nuxated Iron."

It has been arranged to give every purchaser of Nuxated Iron, who wishes to try it, a full size package of Vitamine Tablets with each bottle of Nuxated Iron. Do not be misled by substitutes which often contain drugs.

FREE $1.00 Coupon

This coupon, if used within one week, entitles you to one regular $1.00 package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets, absolutely free, with each bottle of Nuxated Iron that you purchase. Your druggist does not have Vitamine Tablets but you can easily obtain them for you from any wholesale druggist. Take the coupon and present it to your druggist today.

MOVE TO QUASH INDICTMENT OF ALLEN

ment, praying that the indictment against his client be vacated and quashed, alleging that it had been unlawfully returned.

He alleged the Grand Jury had been "urged, advised, solicited and coerced" by District Attorney Pelletier into returning a true bill, after it had previously returned a no bill; also that District Attorney Pelletier had been present during the entire time in which the matter was under discussion by the jury.

HUEL WOMAN IN CASE.

It came out that the larceny alleged in the indictment was a matter between Mrs. Weston Allen, in his private practice as an attorney, and Mrs. Charles Olsen of Hull, in which it was alleged Allen retained for his own uses a judgment of approximately $155 won by his client in a lawsuit.

To the plea in abatement was attached an affidavit by Assistant District Attorney Flaherty in which he stated on the facts in the plea were correct as stated.

Assistant District Attorney Lyons, acting for the prosecution, declared the affidavit by Assistant District Attorney-General Flaherty was insufficient, and argued it was a serious matter to spread upon the records of the court such serious charges against a prosecuting officer upon such inadequate information.

Attorney Parker announced he had in the court several members of the grand jury who brought the indictment and that they would substantiate the charge by their testimony.

"It seems to me, then, that the whole matter should be heard before the plea in abatement is accepted by the court," argued Lyons.

WITNESS WORTH WHILE.

Judge Fessenden agreed that the argument was sound and declined to accept the plea until he had heard the witnesses.

The following members of the grand jury which returned the indictment were then sworn:

Foreman Jeremiah A. Desmond, Ernest L. Bowen, Walter H. Fletcher, Benjamin F. Alpisa, Frederick Morse, Arthur C. Robbins, Sumner Hutchinson, Herman L. Schrieber.

Attorney Lyons asked that the case be tried on its merits before a jury. Attorney Barker said he had never heard of such a proceeding.

Judge Fessenden said a jury was available to hear the case, but that he would take it under advisement in order that he might consider whether a jury should be used.

U. S. AGENTS MAY ARBITRATE R. I. MILL STRIKE

Rioting in East Providence Is a Feature in Progress of Wage Disputes

Providence, Feb. 8.—Reports that agents of the United States Department of Labor are coming to Rhode Island to act as intermediaries between striking textile workers and mill owners, and accounts of rioting from East Providence today marked the progress of the textile strike in this State.

There was a demonstration around two mills employing strikebreakers in Warwick, but no violence occurred.

Both the mill owners and strike leaders were mum on the report that Secretary of Labor Davis was sending agents here to try to end the strike. Both sides denied that they had asked for mediation by the Federal government.

Fifty striking union textile workers and their sympathizers stoned operatives of the United Finishing Company in Pawtucket who are continuing on the job as they were going to their home in an automobile truck as far as could be learned, no one was injured, but a passing automobile was covered with glass as a stone went through to windshield of his car.

CAPT. CRAIG ASKS ABOUT "SINN FEIN" ATTACKS

London, Feb. 8 (By the Associated Press).—In the House of Commons today Captain Charles Craig, Ulster Unionist, asked whether the government had received information regarding organized attacks by "Sinn Feiners" on prominent Unionists of Fermanagh.

The Speaker of the House replied that in his opinion the question should be asked in the Parliament of northern Ireland, but as it was the first question of the kind he would see if the ministry had an answer to give.

In response to this Austen Chamberlain, the government leader, stated that he concurred in the view of the speaker.

Whatever You Do Don't Neglect Your Eyes, Says Dr. Lewis, Who

Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances

4 Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa.—Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye troubles? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr Lewis there is real hope for you. He says that many cases of eye troubles and poor sight than any other one thing. Many whose eyes were failing, say they had their eyes restored through the use of this wonderful prescription. Dr. Lewis says after trying it for a short time, glasses may often be discarded altogether. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would ache dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me. A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using the prescription for fifteen days my sight became clear. I can now read the finest print without any glasses and my eyes do not pain me as they did before. Many of my friends have also used it with splendid results." Dr. Lewis has given the following prescription to many readers of this paper, and it is now believed that thousands of people can now discard their glasses in a few weeks' time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to escape the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. For troubles of major descriptions it may be wonderfully benefiting by following the simple advice. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. Then with this liquid bathe the eyes two or four times daily. You should see a big improvement after the first day or two, even if your eyes are badly inflamed from the start. If your eyes are bothering you, don't wear glasses any more than you can help before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted said, "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its treatment ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them." The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and by one of the very few druggists I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every locality. It is sold in this city by all leading druggists.

DRY WITNESS IS ACCUSED OF PERJURY

Shea Demands Warrant for Agent at Keefe Brothers' Hearing

Counsel for Cornelius and Dennis J. Keefe, at whose hotel on Dartmouth street prohibition agents seized $200,000 worth of liquors, produced at a continued hearing before United States Commissioner Hayes today a Fitchburg policeman who swore he had twice arrested Howard M. Madison, the government agent who secured some of the evidence on which the liquor raid was based.

Attorney Daniel A. Shea, opposing the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of the Keefe brothers, demanded that Commissioner Hayes issue a warrant for Madison's arrest for perjury, as the latter testified yesterday he had never been arrested.

Commissioner Hayes referred the matter to Assistant U. S. Attorney Stone, who said:

"If these facts are true, we will disclaim Madison as a witness and throw out his testimony. We will then stand or fall on the evidence of Agent Clark, who says he saw the sale of liquor made."

Madison was not in court, it being stated he was on an assignment from prohibition headquarters. "He should be here," observed Commissioner Hayes, who adjourned the hearing until tomorrow with the demand that Madison be brought into court to confront his accuser from Fitchburg.

Patrolman David J. Whittemore of Fitchburg was the only witness put on by counsel for the Keefes. He said Madison's reputation for veracity was poor and told of arresting him for the Syracuse police on a warrant charging abandonment of his wife and child.

Whittemore testified he had arrested Madison again on February 27, 1921, in Fitchburg on a charge of the larceny of 200 pounds of sugar. Madison served two months in the House of Correction on this charge, said the policeman. A description of Madison was read to him and he said he was certain he was the man.

Orlean A. Pritchard, an army field clerk, testified. Madison had sworn he received a D. S. C. award during the war. Pritchard read from army records and said he could not find Madison's name among those to whom the D. S. C. award had been made.

LOCAL OPTION ON DAYLIGHT LAW URGED

Plan Is Again Opposed at Hearing by Bay State Grange and B. & M. Railroad

Local option on daylight saving was urged today by Senator Lyman W. Griswold of Greenfield at a State House hearing on a bill to repeal the present law.

The State Grange and Boston & Maine Railroad favored repeal of the law, which was declared by a Grange resolution to be "the most useless law ever forced on an intelligent people, and probably the most useless law ever passed by a State Legislature."

Arguments that farmers and railroad workers are inconvenienced were made by Senator Griswold, father of the bill; Edward E. Wilson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and William N. Howard of North Easton, secretary of the State Grange.

Representative Andrew P. Doyle of New Bedford urged that the period of daylight saving be extended from five to seven months. "We have done a lot for farmers," he said, "but we don't want to hand the entire State over to them."

WIFE OF WOOL FIRM HEAD IS DIVORCED

MRS. RUTH MABBETT AND SON

Custody of the boy, $400 monthly alimony and a Brookline home were awarded to the society woman in Plymouth Divorce Court.

Plymouth, Feb. 8.—Mrs. Ruth M. Mabbett, of Brookline society, was granted a divorce from her husband, Harry I. Mabbett, head of a local woolen manufacturing firm. A cross-libel, alleging infidelity on the part of Mrs. Mabbett was dismissed by agreement.

Mrs. Mabbett was awarded the home in Brookline, alimony of $400 a month, and the custody of their seven-year-old son. Provision was made that the father should support the child and may have his company over every other week-end, one-half of the Christmas and Easter vacations and for three weeks in Summer.

Testimony that Mabbett had repeatedly abused his wife, threw her down and choked her, and was disagreeable and abusive was given by the plaintiff. They were married October 6, 1906. Mrs. Mabbett testified they separated two years ago on account of his "repeated abuse."

Judge Nelson P. Brown granted the divorce decree on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

U. S. IS HOPE OF WORLD, SAYS PIUS XI.

Keynote Is Justice, New Pontiff Tells Cardinal O'Connell

Rome, Feb. 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Pope Pius XI. expressed "unbounded admiration" for the American people and voiced his deep interest in the work of the Washington conference at his reception of Cardinal O'Connell of Boston.

"I was happy to see your peace loving country take the first step toward amelioration of this monstrous evil of armament," the Pontiff said. "Like my illustrious and lamented predecessor, I have unbounded admiration for the energy and charity and the great heart of your people."

"You Americans are young in years but old in wisdom, worldly prudence and foresight. Your innate qualities of fairness, justice and peace, your great moral and spiritual stature and your infinite other resources are the hope and anchor sheet of the world."

POLICY OF PEACE.

The Pope expressed his disappointment that America had not been represented at the conclave which elected him, saying: "It was a great personal sorrow that you were not present."

Cardinal Vannutelli, dean of the Sacred College and other Cardinals, in expressing their regrets and disappointment that Cardinal O'Connell had not arrived in time, said they had urged upon the Pontiff the imperative need for a change in the constitution in order to permit attendance at the conclave of cardinals living in distant countries.

Speaking of this, Cardinal O'Connell said: "I am much touched by all these expressions of regret and sorrow, but of course they do not lessen the lamentable fact that I was not here."

The Cardinal denied a story published in the Rome newspapers that he had brought $2,000,000 from America as a gift to the Vatican.

"I didn't bring a cent," he said. "I had enough to do to bring sufficient money to pay the expenses of such a long and arduous trip."

How the Deadlock in Conclave Was Broken

By International News Service.

Rome, Feb. 8.—The course of the voting in the seven ballots that led to the election of Pope Pius XI. was outlined as follows by the newspaper Il Tempo today:

"This must be taken with reserve, but it is reported in Vatican circles that Cardinals Gasparri and Vanutelli on the first four ballots concentrated the votes of the Italian groups upon Cardinal Maffi, despite sharp opposition from the opposition group led by Cardinal Merry Del Val.

"After the fourth ballot (Saturday evening) Cardinals Gasparri, Vanutelli and Maffi held a conference and decided on the fifth ballot to bring all their strength to Cardinal Ratti. The sixth ballot on Sunday afternoon, while not enough to elect Cardinal Ratti, assured his selection. He was elected by the necessary two-thirds majority on the seventh ballot Monday morning."

Pope Chose Name of Pius Because It Means Peace

Rome, Feb. 8 (By the Associated Press).—The reason for his choice of the name "Pius" was explained by the new Pontiff yesterday to Cardinal Lualdi.

"I was born under a Pius; I came to Rome under a Pius; Pius is the name of peace—then Pius shall be my name," he said.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Aero Club Ball Holds Interest of Smart Set Members

By BETTY ALDEN.

MEMBERS of the smart set are taking considerable interest in the fourth annual ball to be given by the Aero Club of Massachusetts on Friday, February 24, at the Copley-Plaza. The dance, which begins at 9 o'clock, is for the joint benefit of the club fund and the squadron fund of the First Air Unit (101st A. S.) Massachusetts National Guard.

The names of all the officers of the club are of "first family" fibre, and naturally the entire list of patronesses, as well as the committee in charge of the ball, bear names of equal distinction. The group of matrons in charge includes the following: Mesdames J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., Russell S. Codman, G. Richmond Fearing, Jr., William A. Gaston and George S. Mandell.

Serving also on the committee are Messrs. John C. Hutchinson, Charles R. Codman, H. Lyman Armes, James Knowles, Jr., and Gardiner H. Fiske.

Included among the patronesses for the occasion is Mrs. Arthur L. Richmond (Jessie Means), one of the most attractive young matrons of the smart set. Mrs. Richmond, whose mother, Mrs. Arthur Little, is travelling abroad this Winter, I believe, numbers among the brides of last June. Her young husband, a graduate of Harvard '18, is treasurer of the Aero Club, as well as an assistant aid. The other officers of the club are, president, Roger Amory; vice-president, Edward Sears Read, and secretary, Alfred K. Warren, Jr. On the advisory board of the organization are Messrs. Allan Forbes, William A. Gaston, George S. Mandell, Godfrey L. Cabot, Hon. John L. Bates and Allan H. Sturgis.

Apropos of Mrs. Richmond, all society recalls her wedding, solemnized at the North Shore, and one of the most important events of the season. Shortly after her own wedding the former Jessie Means was one of the bridesmaids at the marriage which transformed Dorothy Wells, the younger daughter of Mrs. Livermore Wells, into Mrs. Lothrop Motley Weld. Mr. Weld, by the way, is also an assistant aid of the Aero Club.

A few of the matrons who have given their names as patronesses for the aviation ball: Mesdames Gordon Abbott, Charles Francis Adams, Andrew Adie, Charles Evost Aldrich, William T. Aldrich, Oakes Ames, Francis I. Amory, Reed P. Anthony, William Channing Appleton, Jr., Charles F. Ayer, John L. Bates, Horace Binney Clarence V. Burrage, James Jackson Cabot, Charles R. Codman, Herold J. Coolidge, S. R. V. Crosby, Charles K. Cummings, W. Arthur Lapee, Clarence R. Edwards, Gardiner H. Fiske, Allan Forbes, Donald McKay Frost, Henry H. Fuller, John Chipman Gray, Charles P. Greenough, 3d, R. C. Hamlin and Reginald C. Heath.

All former officers will wear their uniforms at the ball, which, of course, will serve as an added attraction, for what deb is there "with soul so dead" whose heart will not quicken just the smallest bit at the sight of a wing-shouldered uniform?

I note that John Lavalle of Marlboro street is in charge of the decorations for the Aero Club ball, and the choice seems a most excellent one, for Mr. Lavalle is an artist of no mean ability. Like so many other of the Aero Club members, Mr. Lavalle, who married Ellen Tufts, is a member of the Harvard class of '18. He is also the youthful president of the Brush and Chisel Club. The latter is an organization composed of the younger artists of Boston, many of whom are well-known in society. Only recently the Brush and Chisel Club held its annual costume party in Whitney Hall. It proved to be a most successful affair, and convinced the committee in charge that next year this annual affair of the club will probably be given at the Copley-Plaza. Which reminds me that the club is holding an exhibition now, where the work of its members may be seen at the club's rooms.

Random Notes of Society Folk in Town and Country

MISS ELEONORA SEARS, the well-known society sportswoman, was among the Bostonians present at the brilliant dinner and "bal poudre" given on Monday evening by Brigadier-General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at their residence on Fifth avenue. The affair, which was one of the most brilliant of the season at Gotham, was given in honor of Arthur J. Balfour, head of the British delegation at the Washington conference, who is a house guest of the Vanderbilts. There were 200 guests at the dinner, and several hundred additional guests came on for the dance which followed. The women came with powdered coiffures and many wore white wigs. The most important members of Gotham society, as well as from a few other cities, were included among the company.

Among the prominent matrons on the committee for the bridge tournament being held at 2:45 today at Mrs. Rodman Paul Snelling's home on Commonwealth avenue are: Mesdames F. W. Bacon, Louis Bacon, Marshall Fabyan, Edward Hamlin, Gardiner M. Lane, Quincy A. Shaw, Charles Stewart, Max Talbot and John T. Wheelwright. The affair is for the benefit of the Blue Ridge Industrial School of Virginia.

Mrs. Grafton Minot of Boston and Washington recently gave a dinner at her home in the capital for the Polish Minister and Princess Lubomirska. The other guests were Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Blair, Mrs. John Merriam, Mrs. John Heard, also of Boston and the capital, Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Representative Nicholas Longworth, Count Moltke and Mr. Sumner Welles, husband of Esther Slater, formerly of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, Jr. (Frances Saltonstall), of Boston, who are the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Curtis, also of Boston, at the latter's Palm Beach villa, were among the guests for whom Mr. and Mrs. Douglas W. Page gave a dinner at the Beach Club. In the same company were Mrs. Harry Payne Bingham, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer L. Schiff, Miss Ethel Carhart, Harold S. Vanderbilt and Maxwell Norman, the latter of Boston.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Barclay Warburton, Jr., of Philadelphia, on the birth of a son. Mrs. Warburton was formerly Miss Rosalind Lancaster of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake (Anne B. Lindsay) of Beacon street were among the society folk who sailed for England from New York yesterday aboard the Aquitania of the Cunard Line. An unusually large number of personages of prominence in official and social life sailed on the same boat.

Dr. and Mrs. Hobart E. Warren of Boston, who are sojourning at Palm Beach, were among the luncheon guests for whom Mrs. Edward R. Thomas entertained at her cottage on Sunset avenue.

ANKLE LENGTH GOWNS FOR PRINCESS

British Public Gets Glimpse of Royal Wedding Outfit for First Time

By Universal Service.

London, Feb. 8.—For the first time in the history of British royalty, the public, through the medium of women reporters, is being allowed a glimpse of Princess Mary's wonderful wedding trousseau. On special orders from Queen Mary the newspapers are allowed to send representatives and scores of dressmakers and milliners, who are completing the outfit, describe in the minutest detail everything except the lingerie.

Newspapers are devoting columns to the subject, declaring that Princess Mary is going to re-establish modest fashions with ankle length gowns and low waist lines. Favorite colors are pastel tones, soft shades of blue, mauve, pink, beige and gray.

The favorite tea gown of the Princess was designed by Madame Hayward, the famous court dressmaker. It is pastel chiffon with soft shades of mauve and pink over blue. It is sleeveless and round necked and is distinguished by a novel fipband of pleated chiffon with three huge flat velvet begonia blossoms in mauve, pink and blue net at intervals.

The Princess' going-away frock is of powder blue charmeuse embroidered on straight panel lines from the yoke to the foot with pale coral beads clear as crystals, and with a gracefully arranged sash.

There are a multitude of tea gowns, most of lace, in sweet pea tones. A majority of the hats are small, "tilt turned-up" shapes predominating. Many are trimmed with colored flowers. There are also many turbans and toques.

Her coat are long-waisted with pouched backs.

ILLEGALLY WED, BUT IS AWARDED $100,000

Sherman, Texas, Feb. 8.—Because he did not re-marry her after a jury decided that Mary Green Bobbit was the common law wife of I. W. Bobbit, Mrs. Rowena Coover Bobbit yesterday was held by a district court jury never to have been the legal wife of Bobbit, but awarded her $100,000. She sued Bobbit, wealthy stockman, for $250,000.

She could eat anything

—without indigestion or sleeplessness

For a time she had been troubled with gas after her evening meal. The distress was most painful after eating pennaca or other starchy foods, of which she was very fond.

Then she started taking two cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast every night between her evening meal and bedtime. She poured about a half cup of boiling hot water over the yeast cakes, stirred them thoroughly, added a little cold water and drank.

She found she could eat anything and sleep splendidly afterward.

Thousands of men and women are finding that Fleischmann's Yeast corrects stomach and intestinal troubles. It promotes the flow of bile and pancreatic juices. Appetite is always kept normal and pep are promoted against indigestion.

Add 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to your daily diet. You will find that your whole digestive system is greatly benefited. Be sure it's Fleischmann's Yeast—the familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast.

10 P. C. RATE CUT ON MAINE RAILROAD

Bangor & Aroostook Schedule Effective From April 1 to June 30

Bangor, Me., Feb. 8.—The Bangor & Aroostook Railroad today announced a 10 per cent. reduction in freight rates on potatoes, apples and hay in carload lots, effective April 1. The reduction will apply only to shipments originating on the Bangor & Aroostook and destined to other stations on the same or connecting roads, and will terminate June 30, the date when the 10 per cent. reduction by other roads expires.

In announcing the reduction, President Todd stated that the tremendous increase in State, municipal and Federal taxes was the main reason why the reduction could not become effective prior to April 1. Figures were given showing that the total tax for this year will be over $300,000 greater than that paid in 1917.

BRIDGEWATER OPENED TO DRUG VICTIMS

State Farm Will Administer Cures to Unfortunate Addicts of Drugs

Following the Boston American's exposure of the deplorable lack of facilities for adequately treating drug addicts in Massachusetts, Sanford Bates, State commissioner of correction, today announced that the State Farm at Bridgewater would receive drug users and give them proper treatment for the relief of their affliction.

Dr. Frank H. Carlisle, medical director at the State Farm, who handled "dope" cases at the Norfolk State Hospital at Pondville, when that institution cared for drug users, will be in charge of the addicts at Bridgewater.

Commissioner Bates has notified the probation commissioners that Bridgewater would receive the drug users. There are three courses open to those seeking the cure at Bridgewater. One is by sentence, another is by commitment as a condition of probation, and according to present plans voluntary patients will be received.

Commissioner Bates, Dr. Carlisle and other authorities on drug addiction are agreed that voluntary commitment is a failure, that custody is essential until a cure has been effected.

The question of how drug addicts may enter the State Farm will be decided at a public hearing to be given by the legislative committee on Public Health, next Monday, at 10:30 a. m., at the State House.

VOLUNTARY "CURES" FAIL.

Commissioner Bates, Thomas C. O'Brien, retiring commissioner of institutions of Boston, and Dr. Bernard W. Carey, deputy State commissioner of public health, were appointed a committee by heads of various State and municipal departments to draft a bill providing for proper quarters and treatment of drug addicts.

One of the cardinal points to be brought out to the legislative committee is the dismal failure to voluntary commitments. The committee, as well as other experts on the narcotic evil, will also emphasize the need of stricter punishment for "dope" pedlars, who wreck thousands of lives in Massachusetts every year with deadly drugs.

In an interview with a Boston American reporter investigating the drug scourge, Dr. Carlisle said that his experience has taught him that voluntary commitments are a failure and a needless cost to the community.

"Unless the patient is committed on condition that he cannot leave the institution until completely recovered from drugs and the desire to return," he said, "the treatment is practically useless.

"We have found that most of the persons who voluntarily ask for treatment lose their good reputations to get rid of the habit and then they find no good day. We have no means of keeping them until they are well.

ASKS MINIMUM SENTENCE.

"When they run out of funds and temporarily cannot pay for drugs, many drug slaves volunteer to take the cure and after a few days—when the healing is in process—they decide to quit. The time and money spent on them is wasted.

"I would suggest that drug addicts be given a minimum sentence of several months and then be subject to release at the discretion of the physician in charge of the institution. Those who volunteer to take the treatment should agree to such an arrangement.

"Before we can handle the drug cases properly here at Bridgewater, we will need a few additional attendants and some equipment. We have plenty of room to take care of these unfortunates properly. In fact, conditions here for preventing smuggling of 'dope' and segregation from other prisoners are better than at Norfolk.

"Drug addiction should be treated as a disease. It may be a vice to begin with, but in time the user must take it to keep normal and the gratification of pleasure is gone. It is not proper to put drug cases with patients having other diseases.

"The reactions of narcotics are different than other diseases and a drug patient, through no fault of his own, reduces havoc with the other patients. While they are being relieved of the habit or disease they should be kept apart from other inmates."

A memorial committee has already been named and will report at the annual town meeting.

On This Rock We Stand

An Editorial from the Hearst Newspapers

During the war the favorite indoor pastime of fireside warriors was to denounce the Hearst papers as pro-German and anti-British.

At the present time the favorite indoor pastime of the same kind of patriots is to denounce the Hearst papers as pro-Irish and anti-British. We do not know how the mental processes of these fireside warriors and statesmen move, their wonders to perform. We have often thought it would be amusing and instructive to take one of their heads apart and see what is in it, or rather what isn't in it. The Hearst papers are ALWAYS and ONLY pro-American.

The Hearst papers hate English interference with our American affairs, English diplomatic intrigue, English alliances, English propaganda, English espionage.

None of these things has any place in our national life.

Whoever invites foreign interference in our affairs is not a loyal citizen.

Whoever advocates a union of America with England or any other country is a misguided citizen, a dangerous citizen and a mighty poor specimen of independent American manhood.

We wish every people in the world well. We would have them—if we could—all be as happy and comfortable as our own people. We would be glad to see them all live in peace and security.

BUT WE ARE UNALTERABLY OPPOSED TO ANY POLITICAL ALLIANCE WITH ANY OF THEM—any political PARTNERSHIP with nations less sincere, less peaceful, less prosperous, less safe and less solvent than our own.

That's our doctrine.

It is a good doctrine.

It is an American doctrine.

We get it from Washington.

We get it from Jefferson.

We get it from Lincoln.

We get it from the traditions of a most glorious past, from a history so splendid that the heart thrills at each new reading; from every good and wise American who ever had a part in making our America the wonder and envy of times present and of the ages that are to come.

It is the doctrine that is a religion with us—a creed.

We live to defend it.

We would not be at all unwilling to die for it, if that small sacrifice was necessary to its continuance

And we do not doubt that we and the millions of Americans like ourselves are able to defend and will defend and maintain this true American doctrine against the wiles of foreign influence and the mean and base intrigue of domestic traitors to the traditions of the past, and then hand it down unimpaired to our sons' sons to defend and maintain, as long as the Republic stands on its mighty foundations foursquare to every storm of fate and destiny.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Film "Saturday Night" Seen as Cinderella From Slipper Incident On

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THE latest work from the megaphone of Cecil De Mille is the attraction at the Orpheum this week. "Saturday Night" is an original story by Jeanie McPherson, Mr. De Mille's son-in-law, who has heretofore confined her writing to adapting the story of others to the screen. Miss McPherson has taken a number of rather usual incidents and has made of them a story calculated to hold an audience during the five reels. To her credit—also to Mr. De Mille's—it may be said that she succeeds. What the story would be unless swamped in typical De Mille lavishness gives one food for thought.

Miss McPherson has gone back to an incident used in Cecil De Mille's former success, "Male and Female," taken from Barrie's play, "The Admirable Crichton." There is a phase of the story deals slightly with the elopement of a young heiress with her chauffeur. It was remarked during the piece that they had been disowned and that the girl's former friends would have nothing to do with her. Miss McPherson shows us what happens when an heiress elopes with her chauffeur and when a young millionaire marries his laundress' daughter. It is Cinderella from the slipper incident on.

LEATRICE JOY

Just what one supposes will happen—does. The laundress' daughter doesn't know what fork to use, chews gum incessantly, drinks too much wine and goes to sleep during a dinner party, and objects to taking a bath any oftener than Saturday night. Her husband's family and friends are shocked at her.

USES TOOTHPICKS

On the other hand, the heiress' chauffeur husband eats in his shirt sleeves, is addicted to the use of toothpicks at the table, likes Coney Island and all she objects to bathing any oftener than Saturday night. His friends are genuinely shocked at his habit of smoking.

After a severe test of love, in which both husbands favor the laundress' daughter, incidents pile up to a conclusion. And the end is the old solution of "kind to kind."

Leatrice Joy is the bright particular star of the production. She has followed in the footsteps of Gloria Swanson as the lay figure for De Mille trappings, and she proves more than equal to him. Miss Swanson because there is less artificiality in her work will remain sincerely. It is not surprising that Mr. De Mille has signed her up for his next film, "Manslaughter."

NAGLE DOES WELL.

Conrad Nagle does very well with the rôle of the millionaire. He plays with ease and has a good sense of values. The other two leading members of what is nearly an all-star cast, Edith Roberts and Jack Mower, are not so good, though in all fairness it must be admitted that their roles are more cut and dried than those of Miss Joy and Mr. Nagle. Miss Roberts is cast as the impish Shamrock O'Day, a role which one burlesques a trifle, while Mower plays the part of Tom McGuire, the chauffeur.

The film is gorgeously put on with exotic costumes and backgrounds drawing "ooo" and "ahs" from a bewildered audience. There is a splendid company of supporting players, though their names are not given. Edythe Chapman gives a capital performance as the millionaire's mother, while Theodore Roberts tills his cigar familiarly as the heiress' uncle, and Julia Faye does well with the rôle of Nagle's haughty sister. John Davidson has a small part, which he carries excellently, while Sylvia Ashton is good as Shamrock's mother.

PAULINE FREDERICK BACK.

DESPITE the gorgeousness of other productions in town, the "Western" starring Pauline Frederick at the Majestic, Boylston and Beacon Theatres stands out for the work of its star. Miss Frederick is unquestionably the finest emotional actress we have on the screen today. Nazimova could not cope with her in this field, but she seems to have given up acting for posing. Meanwhile Miss Frederick continues to give us the most satisfying pictures we have.

PAULINE FREDERICK

This time she is seen in "Two Kinds of Women," adapted from the novel by Jackson Gregory, "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch." The "two kinds of women" in the story are those who can and those who can't. Miss Frederick is emphatically one of the former. She gives a vivid picture of ranch life and shows us a woman who elects to lead it.

The companion picture, "Silent Years," taken from a story, "Mamselle Jo," spoils an otherwise excellent bill.

TRANCE GIRL'S MALADY KNOWN TO SCIENCE

The mysterious "trance" which held eighteen-year-old Clara Beauclaire of Brockton entombed for days at a time, and which was cured when a man unknown to her held her hand, is not an unknown condition to psychiatrists, according to Dr. Harry C. Solomon, Harvard Medical School expert.

Miss Beauclaire, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Beauclaire of No. 69 North Main street, Brockton, has existed in a somnolent state, sometimes partial and at other times total, which baffled several physicians and a Boston specialist.

INTERVALS OF LUCIDITY.

Here sleep was broken by intervals of lucidity when she went to theatres and dances. These intervals were followed by a recurrence of the mysterious malady.

Finally a stranger, Harold Sawyer who claims to be the only son of a seventh son and possessed of unusual powers, appeared and held her hand for a few moments and conversed with her. The girl at once came out of the trance and appeared much quicker than she had in the past.

"Such sleeps," Dr. Solomon declares, "are common among those whose minds have become slightly unbalanced. They sometimes appear in cases of mild hysteria, and again they are common in those whose minds are seriously diseased. I am, of course, not in a position to say what may have caused the somnolence of the Brockton girl.

ASSOCIATION AROUSED.

"She was awakened, however, not through any supernatural power of the man who held her hand. What probably occurred was that the touch of this man's hand, or perhaps something he said to her, aroused in her mind some association with something that had occurred previously, and which probably caused her semi-consciousness.

"This association restored her to normal. A psychopathologist working on her case would have tried to find just such an association, by inquiring into the details of her life previous to her attacks. The stranger who held her hand probably found by chance just this association."

Canty Back at Capital

George R. Canty, former executive secretary to ex-Mayor Peters, has returned to Washington, D. C., where he will take up his duties as secretary to Congressman George Holden Tinkham.

America entered the World War to save its own soul, declared President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University in an address before the thirteenth annual dinner of the Engineers' Club at the Boston City Club.

"We went into the war to save our own soul. And we did. Had we not joined in that war we would be ashamed of ourselves to this day," he asserted.

President Lowell's statement is almost a paraphrase of the statement made by Ambassador Harvey at a Lincoln Day banquet which drew down a storm of criticism on the Ambassador's head.

President Lowell commended the efforts of leaders at Washington to use this country's influence for the moral welfare of the world, saying that this policy is more generous than selfish isolation.

PREDICTS RUSSIA AND U. S. WILL GET TOGETHER

A declaration that "America and Russia would be linked more closely than ever as time passed, and that this country would shortly deal with Russia despite its aversion to Lenine and Trotsky, was made by Rev. George L. Parker of Newton Centre in a speech before the Town and Gown Club of Unity House. He asserted that America should make every effort to secure Russia's trade, pointing out that if this is not done Germany will do so in short order. Prior to the war he was pastor of the British-American church in Petrograd for three years.

OIL PLOT PROBE NOT OPPOSED AT WHITE HOUSE

Statement Says Harding Has No Objection to Fullest Inquiry

By Universal Service.

Washington, Feb. 8. — The White House authorized the following statement.

"The executive, and nobody connected with the administration, has the slightest objection to the fullest Congressional inquiry into everything relating to our relations with Mexico."

This statement appears to set at rest the growing impression that certain administrative entities did not welcome such an investigation as that provided for in a resolution introduced by Representative Tom Connally of Texas in the House. A current opinion expressed up to the time of issuance of the White House statement has been that the State Department in particular did not want an investigation.

Efforts were made at the State Department to obtain the views of Secretary Hughes or Under-Secretary of State Fletcher. Mr. Hughes was "occupied with other matters," Mr. Fletcher authorized a statement "that he did not care at this time to become involved in any discussion of Mexican affairs."

Previously it had been announced that Fletcher had planned to sail for Belgium immediately on the close of the arms conference. There he would take up his new duties as minister to that government. However, it was announced at the State Department that the date of Mr. Fletcher's sailing is uncertain at present.

The Connally resolution is understood to be in the hands of the State Department. P. P. Campbell of Kansas, chairman of the Rules Committee of the House, has elected to pursue that method of having the resolution dealt with.

The White House statement was a cause of gratification in quarters well informed as to the scope of the scandal. The effect is expected to be that responsibility will be fixed where it belongs for efforts to suppress the Congressional inquiry.

Notwithstanding the White House standpoint as expressed in the statement, the impression continued to obtain on Capitol Hill that the Connally resolution was being successfully opposed by influential parties. It was freely predicted that the investigation is to be "chlorotormed" and it was added that the somnambetic is being prepared by expert hands.

"LILIOM" IS AN UNUSUAL PLAY FINELY DONE

Wonderful and Weird Drama at Wilbur Is Treat for Playgoers

By FRED J. McISAAC, Dramatic Editor.

It doesn't matter how many plays you may have seen in your long or short career as a patron of the drama, you never saw anything like "Liliom," at least in this country. It is at the Wilbur Theatre.

This wonderful and weird adaptation from the Hungarian of Franz Molnar was presented upon the American stage by the Theatre Guild, an organization of actors and producers who have produced a number of plays which would have been rejected with scorn by an ordinary experienced manager. I doubt if any manager who saw "Liliom" in manuscript would have dreamed of producing it. He would have declared it as completely insane.

And yet, insane as it may be, it is one of the most delightful entertainments I have ever seen.

MARVELOUS ACTING.

There is no question that the acting is responsible for its success. In bad hands "Liliom" would be something appalling. To think of it in stock is beyond imagination. It takes a lot of good acting.

Joseph Schildkraut, the young European actor who played here in "Pagans" and who is showing on the screen in "Orphans of the Storm," has the title role.

Liliom is a young rowdy of a type which may be common in Hungary but is not usual in America. He is decent beneath a very thick coating of brutality. He loves the little girl who clings to him. He is ready to do murder for her, but he doesn't want to work for her, and he can't express his feelings except when it is too late.

UNUSUAL SITUATION.

When he commits suicide to avoid arrest, he doesn't pass out of the show, for "Liliom" is not an ordinary play. He is arrested by policemen from heaven and tried in a celestial court. He is sentenced to fifteen years in the vacuum cleaner and then returned to earth for one day to see if he can do one good turn to his wife's baby, now a girl of fifteen. He repents, but he loses his temper and slaps her. Then back to the spiritual housegow.

The originality of the situations, the cleverness of the dialogue the unusual theories of life and death all make "Liliom" extraordinary.

But we have to come back to the acting. Eva Le Gallienne, as the little servant girl who attaches herself to "Liliom" and loved him dumbly, as unable as he to express her real feelings, divides honors with Schildkraut. As the entire company is superb, Maude Odell, as the proprietor of a "Merry Go Round"; Horace Alden, Rhon Brecher, Gerald Hamer deserve high praise. And no part is too small to be finely done.

Twenty-six members of the Junior League, under the leadership of Miss Isabella Mumford, today visited the Roxbury Crossing station of the Baby Hygiene Association.

The members seemed impressed by the preventive character of the work. This was stressed by the speaker when she said: "When a child is very ill and through careful nursing has been brought back to health, we feel that a great thing has been accomplished. We do not always consider how much greater the achievement could we have prevented that illness through knowledge of the laws of health and obedience to those laws."

Is Backache Making You Miserable?

WHY put up with that nagging backache? You can't be happy when every day brings morning lameness, sharp, shooting pains and that dull, tired, all-worn-out feeling. You want to be well and the best way to get well is to find the cause of your trouble and correct it. Have you given any thought to your kidneys? Very likely a cold, chill or strain has slowed up your kidneys and that's why you have those racking backaches, those stabbing pains, and that weak, depressed feeling. You may have headaches, too, with dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities. But don't worry! Just take things easier for awhile, and help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Assist the medicine, too, by drinking water freely, eating lightly and getting plenty of rest, fresh air and exercise. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

Read How These Boston Folks Found Relief:

ARTHUR SMITH, Barber, 255 Emerson St., S. Boston, says: "My kidneys troubled me considerably and my back often ached so I couldn't bend or stoop. I would just drag along and at times I had sharp catches through my kidneys that almost doubled me up. The kidney action was irregular, too. Doan's Kidney Pills soon strengthened me up. The backaches left and my kidneys acted regularly."

MRS. DENNIS MAGNER, 2 Agawam St., Revere, says: "My kidneys were weakened by over-work. The kidney secretions were unnatural and caused me much annoyance. I had an awful ache in the small of my back and I got so tired that my work was a burden. I was subject to dizzy spells and my sight was blurred. My joints became so stiff I could hardly get off or on a street car. I was told the trouble came from my kidneys and I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills. One box regulated the action of my kidneys and rid me of the backache."

M. J. DALEY, Painter, 48 Furness St., says: "If there was anything that would put one's kidneys out of order at times, it is the fumes of the turpentine from the paint. This was the cause of my kidneys being in a disordered condition a few years ago. I could hardly stoop enough to pick up a small pail of paint, and to reach up was impossible. The least turn would send pains through my kidneys. A few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured the trouble."

RETAILERS PLAN TO CUT COST OF DISTRIBUTION

Boston Merchants Attending Convention of National Association in New York

By HARRY A. RENWELL.

New York, Feb. 8.—Lower prices, to be brought about by a reduction of costs of distribution, was the keynote of the eleventh annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association at the Hotel Pennsylvania here today.

A large number of Boston merchants and executives, numbering many women, were included in the record-breaking attendance of more than 1,500 delegates from all parts of the country.

Among the Bostonians, Louis Kirstein, vice-president, Frank A. Black and T. K. Cory of William Filene's Sons Company; Felix Vorenberg, Gilchrist Company; George W. Mitton, Jordan Marsh Company, and W. A. Hawkins of the same store, were present when the three-day session began.

The first event of the program today was a meeting of the board of directors, advertising group, of which Frank A. Black of William Filene's Sons Company, Boston, is chairman. The address of welcome was delivered by Richard H. Webber, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, who spoke at length on retail sales and profits.

LEVER ACT AND PRICES.

Mr. Webber reviewed the history of the Lever Act, its lapse and subsequent activities of the United States government in investigating prices.

At the afternoon session Louis Kirstein, vice-president of William Filene's Sons Company, analyzed "Merchandising for 1922." He said, in part:

"It is commonly conceded that the cost of retail distribution is high and that there is altogether too great a spread between production cost and retail prices.

"Available statistics show that the net profits on the average retail business are much less than they are popularly supposed to be and the small percentage that is left to the owners of retail business is little enough compensation for the risk involved.

"A difference of one or two per cent. in markup, which could hardly be noticed bythe public, makes the difference between success and failure in the average large retail business.

"It has further been proved that retail profiteering is extremely difficult because of competition, which is perhaps keener in retail distribution than in any other business. Nor, to my mind, is the problem solved by eliminating some of the special services and privileges, such as charge accounts, frequent free deliveries and return of merchandise, so long as the public demand these special services, which successful stores are bound to furnish.

AN AVENUE OF ECONOMY.

"If we retailers merchandise more on facts and less on opinions and try to sell the public what they want instead of what we think they ought to have, another avenue of economy will be opened. Here again manufacturers by close co-operation with retailers whose ears are close to the ground, will be enabled to effect savings which will be passed along to the consumer.

"There is no doubt that at present we are making the public pay too much for our merchandising mistakes instead of taking markdowns as soon as merchandise proves to be slow selling. The carrying charges on slow moving goods bulk large in the course of the year and might be materially reduced per merchandising on facts which should be available to every retailer.

"Reducing the cost of distribution should be considered as both a duty and privilege by all reputable retailers. The industry as a whole would benefit by this point of view and the individual retailer would have the opportunity of proving the truth of the old adage, 'He profits most who serves best.'"

THE bouffant mode, though it has been confined almost entirely to gowns for evening, is still a factor to be very much taken into consideration. So Molyneux considers it, and sends it puffily forth in satin and Chantilly lace in the gown sketched at the left. The foundation and corsage are of pale pink satin, the latter veiled and sleeved with pink Chantilly lace. And sections of similarly patterned black Chantilly lace are held out by huge hoops to make the skirt. A rose or two—of pale pink velvet—posed at the waist line and dripping down the lace, are charmingly decorative.

GRECIAN simplicity and length of line dominate a formal evening gown from Maison Carrel. It is, quite naturally, of black satin, and equally naturally, its corsage band and heavy trimming are of dull gold. Miss Sargent will be retained on account of her past record of "three years' excellent service."

The board ruled, Ladd said, "that in view of our findings and the effect that the unusual publicity of this case will have upon the morale of his pupils, the best interests of our schools require that the further services of the teacher who inflicted the blows be dispensed with. Having been suspended until after our investigation, he will therefore be dismissed February 10, 1922."

U. S. TRANSPORT OF WAR FAME IS BURNED

Crew Escapes as Northern Pacific Catches Fire Off Cape May, N. J.

By Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 8.—The former transport Northern Pacific, which last claimed headlines in 1919 when she crashed on to a sandbar off Fire Island with 3,000 American soldiers she was bringing back from France, today was destroyed by fire forty miles off Cape May, N. J.

A crackle of the radio early this morning brought word that fire had broken out aboard the swift steamer and that she was a mass of flames.

Later messages reported she had been abandoned by Captain William Ligati and her skeleton crew who were taking her to drydock in Chester, Pa.

Rescue of all her crew by steamships which had rushed to the scene next was recorded.

The latest message stated that the vessel, blazing fiercely and listing hard to starboard, was drifting southeastward.

For several months the former transport lay tied up in Hoboken. Then purchased from the government by the Admiral Line for service on the Pacific, she left last night for Chester under command of the man who had tramped her bridges during the stirring days of the war. She carried no passengers.

The tanker Herbert G. Wylie, bound from Tampico to Portland, Me., and the steamship Transportation were the first vessels to reach the doomed craft. They promptly reported by radio rescue of all the crew, who had taken to their boats.

WESTMINSTER AND PERE MARQUETTE PLAY IN CRUCIAL GAME

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Perching space on the Arena rafters will be at a premium this evening.

When the hands of the pink clock indicate the hour of 8:15 p. m. there will be inaugurated the slippiest Pe tussle of the local season, with the Pere Marquettes and the Westminster hockey teams, the contenants, and, what is likely to prove, the Eastern hockey championship as the stake.

They have met before, those two teams and the meetings have been of a character that kept the assembled fans almost continually on their feet, shouting fulsome praise to this player's brilliant effort; screaming derision at some rough, rude act of another, and getting wildly agitated at every little happening from the opening until the ending of the game.

In these past meetings the Westminsters landed on top, but never without considerable difficulty and a kindly prod or two from "Lady Luck." The small margin of the scores, however, has been the only factor of Westminster favor admitted by the Pere Marquette.

* * *

The latter array believes it has the better outfit, both individually and collectively, and is firmly convinced that if Dame Fortune had been impartial victory would have stood in favor of the Caseys.

* * *

Because of the result of past games between tonight's contestants, the "Writers" have been instilled as the odds-on team tonight for the margin necessary in a well-ordered hockey array and suffered somewhat from mediocre goal guarding.

* * *

Gradually, however, these flaws have been eliminated. Team play has been developed among the forwards, also the art and desire to hinder opponents when they are in control of the puck, and gradually Art Donahue, the former Dartmouth goalie, who finished the game two years ago, has regained the form that made him the most brilliant net guardian of his college years.

* * *

With Pop Conley, Red Synnott, Ed Coyle or Johnnie Murphy in the forward positions, the Casey boys have ability and experience when on the attack, or when checking back, should they need to. Neil Cahill has been of exceptional caliber while the development of Joe Healy into a first-rate defense player, and the acquisition of Alex Campbell, has given the Caseys a defensive combination of remarkable strength.

* * *

Captain Frankie Downing is the one local player in the vanguard of the Westminster team, and has proved himself the best general man to play on the Arena surface this season.

* * *

His regular wingmates are shorty Vesa and Sure Thing Stone. The former is a wicked shot and is a clever stick handler, but is not prone to overwork it, often being found loafing far afield and seldom engaging in checking back while the latter has a knack of all around ability, which appears even better because of his enthusiasm and effervescence.

LINEUP AT ARENA.

"CASEYS"	WESTMINSTER
Enright, lw.	r.w., S. Veno
Murphy, lw.	r.w., Rudolf
Synnott, c.	c., Downing
Conley, r.w.	lw., Shay
B. Healy, r.w.	lw., W. Veno
Campbell, l.d.	r.d., Small
J. Healy, r.d.	l.d., Smith
Donahue, g.	g., Reaume

Just as Frankie Downing leads as a centre ice man, Irving Small, the Westminster coverpoint, leads as an outer defence player, and in combination with Art Smith, forms a difficult barrier for opposing teams to overcome.

* * *

And, when they have overcome that barrier, opposing teams face in Reaume, the net-tender with the best record of the current season. Reaume is a Canadian product, and by far the most capable puck stopper that has entered local hockey in many years.

* * *

Consequently tonight's game brings together a team that depends largely on the exceptional ability of three outstanding stars, and a team that while it has stars of the same quality, is better ballanced in all positions, and just as good as the latter team, for its strength depends on combining its well balanced players, that can not be overcome by an excellent chance for victory.

Tech furnished quite a bit of practice for the B. A. A. last night, the latter running up a score 7-1. The Boston club's defense was not easy. Like of it as they expected, for they found Hushie Hicks, the engineers goal tender, admirably favorable in the final and initial periods.

Hughes played his best the first ne e when he was virtually peppered with shots, and stopped 21 in all. His resistance to such bombardment was a reflective test that he well made. Percy at close range, slipped by.

Tech's only goal in the game was scored in this period by Wilbur on a pass from Du Vernet in front of the B. A. A. cage.

Tech played without Neil MacNeil, the sturdy defence man. For the first time this season Coach Ed Dow did not put into action his whole bunch of second string men and, even with out MacNeil, the subs made a fine showing.

The Cadorons counted five goals in the second session, Jack Hutchinson tallying four times, and Hickey once. McCarthy shot the final goal for the B. A. A. early in the last session. Nickie was again on his job, while the subs managed to keep Dave Ingalls' team pretty busy on his own territory.

* * *

Yale's surprising battle against Dartmouth and its recent victory over Princeton makes the Elis appear more formidable for the game with Harvard Saturday night. That Yale will take care of itself in the classic is indicated by the reports of the Blue-Green game at New Haven.

HARVARD'S BASKETBALL TEAM WILL PLAY DARTMOUTH

Harvard's victory over Yale will serve as an incentive for the Crimson basketball team when it faces Dartmouth at Hanover Saturday. The Crimson and Green's margin of victory over the Elis was practically the same, the Harvard score being 28-13 while Dartmouth's triumph was 24-10

Harvard will meet the stiffest opposition of the season at Hanover Cullen, the Dartmouth right forward is leading the Intercollegiate League as a point getter with forty-eight points in four games. Maguire, the other forward ranks high as a maker of baskets from the floor, with ten.

The Crimson will play a passing game, paying particular attention to keeping the ball on the move rather than dividing up for individual defence. When the waiting offence is in Harvard's territory four players will be traveling with them, a man stationed near the centre of the playing court.

* * *

The Winchester K. of C. team will meet the Wakefield A. A. Friday night at Winchester in the second game of their two-game series. Wakefield won the first game early in the season by a close score and the Winchester fans feel confident that the "Cleats" are due to come back with a win Friday night. The Winchester five are open for games away from home any night in the week.

* * *

The John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company's basketball five will play the Roxbury Tigers at the former's High School Gymnasium.

Much interest has been taken by the following of each team. Both teams have been successful thus far this season.

* * *

The John Hancock team wants away-from-home games with strong amateur and semi-professional teams. Managers of teams wishing to meet this fast aggregation kindly communicate with C. A. Brewer.

* * *

The Harvard freshman basketball team meets Springfield Y. M. C. A. College, '26, tonight at 7 o'clock in the Freshman Athletic Building in Cambridge. The yearling outfit has won its two games so far. The visiting team has the reputation of being a capable outfit.

* * *

The Winthrop Legion basketball team will oppose the Fitchburg Progress tonight at the City Hall auditorium, Fitchburg. The Fitchburg team will put its strongest lineup in the game in an endeavor to carry off the honors. The local team realizes it is up against a hard battle with Winthrop.

CHARGE PERDUE PLAYERS WERE IN PRO GAME

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 8.—N. A. Kellogg, athletic director at Purdue University, has received information that six Purdue University football players had participated in a professional football game between Gas City and Marion, Ind., at Marion last Feb. No charges have been filed, but an investigation is under way.

When interviewed, the Purdue director said he had been informed that Edmund Ralph Carman, captain; Ferdinand F. Kirk, John Meeker, Paul H. Macklin, Joseph Williams and Nelson Weber took part in the game.

"Four of the men are seniors" said Director Kellogg, "and none of the men mentioned in taking part in any other branch of athletics as most of them are ineligible, being down in their studies. Webb and Williams are second string men on last year's varsity. They are both sophomores.

"We are conducting an investigation, but the semester has just ended and it will be a few days before there is anything definite to announce."

LOS ANGELES IS ASPIRANT FOR BOAT RACES

Athletic Club Leases Water Front and Plans Big Clubhouse for Aquatic Meets

By Charles E. Hughes.

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—Southern California aspires to become the yachting and powerboating centre of the world.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club has entered the field to help bring about the realization of this ambition and has been very successful in its first midwinter boat races. Assurance is given that Eastern craft will be brought to the West Coast to participate in the Spring events. One of these is Miss Chicago II., the swift hydroplane of Commodore Sheldon Clark of the Chicago Yacht Club.

The Athletic Club, backed with ample financial support, is going ahead energetically. It has leased from the City of Los Angeles for thirty years, 2,000 feet of very desirable water frontage on the Terminal Island shore at Los Angeles Harbor. The leasehold also includes eight acres of ground and several hundred acres of ideal anchorage, and the club is obligated to make heavy expenditures on improvements.

Proposed developments call for a yachting annex costing a quarter million dollars, and the club's scheme to provide adequate anchorage and other facilities and accommodations for the pleasure fleets expected as the sport develops, involve another half million.

The clubhouse is to be a structure of utility as well as charm. It will be a beautiful pile of Spanish colonial architecture, 240 feet long and sixty wide, with large lounging and dining rooms, sun parlors and commodious club quarters.

The building is to be surmounted by a novel and interesting tower 159 feet high and fifty square, containing many luxurious sleeping rooms for members and guests. This is the conception of Frank A. Garbutt, million aire sportsman and a leading figure in the club's affairs. The view from this tower will be one of the most fascinating in all Southern California.

Los Angeles already boasts of a fleet of motorboats that includes world-record holders, and more than a hundred others will be under construction before long, their power plants having already been purchased.

After this season the club will hold speed contests every month, both up and down the Southern California coast.

SUNDAY GOLFING HERE MAY SPREAD TO ENGLAN

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Sunday golf in America has made a strong impression on English and Scotch players contesting in this country, it was learned today from a representative of British professionals who have toured America.

In Scotland and England there is no golf on the Sabbath, except surreptitiously.

Why do not the players in Scotland, the birthplace of the game, and in England populate the golf links on Sunday? To the question, the British representative replied that the Summer days are several hours longer than in the United States, permitting golfers to play in the morning before work or in the evening after the day's toil is over.

OARSMEN AT PENN TO GET AN EARLY START

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—Coach Wright announced today that candidates for the University of Pennsylvania crews would be on the Schuylkill River within two weeks unless there is a marked change in weather conditions. Seventeen shells will be on the water, he said.

Wright has appealed to all former Pennsylvania rowing stars to come here, to devote some time each week in helping to coach the crews.

BENNY LEONARD RISKS HIS TITLE IN BOUT WITH KANSAS

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN,

Universal Service 8 laft Correspondent.

New York, Feb. 8.—Alone in his class almost as much as Jack Dempsey is as a heavyweight, Benny Leonard, in Madison Square Garden on Friday night, will begin a series of fights that will mark his retirement as a lightweight. Characteristically, this zealous little fighting machine will tackle the hardest part of the job first—Rocky Kansas.

Conceded to be one of the few lightweights capable of giving the champion an argument, the Buffalo boy will have the moment in the spotlight and a fling at the title—his second within the twelve month.

On that other occasion—in Rickards' pine bowl last June—Kansas stayed on his feet through a twelve-round fight without a decision, but the champion, Benny, received the popular verdict.

* * *

The rugged vigor the challenger has shown since his meteoric rise a year ago, and the lucky charm the Garden seems to hold for him, have combined to lead the sporting public to look upon the coming fight as the best offering that will be seen in the lightweight division this year.

* * *

They will see the most durable and the most graceful of contemporary champions engage a challenger with hitting ability that makes up most of his lacks in things that come only with years of experience in championship fights.

Kansas is a firm believer in omens, and he thinks the Garden bears him a lucky charm. He stopped his work at Freddy Welsh's health farm to talk about it.

"I'm always 50 per cent. better in the big shack," he said. "It was there the golden Horseshoes began falling my way when I fought Willie Jackson. Willie was a pretty clever boy, and the wise lads made him a two to five favorite. Read the dope and find how their judgment suffered.

"Then when I fought Tendler, I was any price. Look back and see what I did to the pride of Philadelphia. And all because the Garden is a lucky old barn for me.

* * *

"Those two fights gave me plenty of confidence for my fly at Benny, but don't think I am underestimating him He is the greatest fighter I ever saw, and if I beat him I will consider myself a genuine champion. I have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Soccer Men After Fenway Park for Title Contest

Lowell, Fe. 8.—John C. Abbot of the Abbot soccer team which is to par for the Eastern championship with the winner of the Todd Shipyard-Harrison game, is going after Fenway Park, Boston, as the scene of the battle, which will be fought in March.

Mr. Abbot believes soccer interest justifies this step, and as the game must be played on neutral ground, he says New Englanders are entitled to see it.

That's enough to make a fellow stretch himself to the limit."

The champion is working at a Harlem gymnasium with all the easy confidence that is born of proved ability. He is going through his routine program with never a worry about this important fight.

It is just this unworried assurance that has kept the lightweight crown in a place ever since that memorable night in May five years ago when the veteran Freddy Welsh thudded into the mat.

* * *

"The fight?" he asked. "Oh, yes! I do fight Kansas Friday night. He's a clever lad, and I know he's going to make me step, but I can't do any worse than get licked. So why should I worry about it?

"I am glad to meet a fellow like this Buffalo lad. Victory over such a man means something."

GRIFFITH SAYS MAN WHO BEATS BRITTON MUST POSSESS SKILL

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Griffiths, Akron, O., welterweight, who will have Mickey Walker as an opponent in a ten-round bout at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building Friday night, believes it will require rare boxing skill rather than a punch to dethrone Jack Britton.

"It is interesting to read the statements of all the young hustlers who are going to win Britton's title," writes Griffith. "They all seem to agree on the fact that Britton has gone back and that he is ripe to be knocked off his throne.

"I am willing to admit that, the title holder is not as great a performer as he was five years ago, but he still knows enough about the fine points of the ring game to dispose of the contenders without much trouble.

"Too many of our noble fighting men have the foolish idea that a punch and plenty of strength are all that are required to become a champion.

* * *

"Britton, like myself, has always preferred the rough hard hitting fellows as opponents to the fast, clever boys. When you are opposing a puncher, you merely have to look out for his wallop. He is harmless unless he can count with the big sock. It is a different story when you are battling a skilful performer. You are obliged to keep on your toes all of the time or you will be outpointed.

* * *

"Britton, although thirty-eight years old, is still able to trounce all of the heavy hitters in the welterweight class. He could stand on a handkerchief, like Peter Jackson and George Dixon could, and beat back most of the opposition.

"A fast, clever boxer with a knowledge of inside boxing, however, has a chance to win over Britton. If one can fire the champion, he then has a chance of beating him. A puncher couldn't do this, but a rapid-fire boxer could.

"This is why I believe I would have the best chance of any of the welterweights in a clash with the champion. I have the necessary speed and boxing skill to carry the champion along at a lively clip. I would then try to tire him after which I would attempt to pile up enough points to gain a victory.

* * *

"I am in splendid condition for my bout with Mickey Walker in Boston Friday night. I realize that the Newark boy is one of the best of the new crop of welterweights. We recently engaged in a torrid bout at Newark, and I thought I had a margin on points though Walker's friends were just as sure Mickey had the decide. I am glad that our return bout is being fought in Boston, as a decision will be rendered. I am not very enthusiastic over no-decision contests as they don't get one real consideration from a champion."

* * *

Hambone Kelly punched his way out from on the pugilistic stage when he stopped Jack Savage at the Carlyle Club's show. Kelly is a good socker and if he applies himself properly to his training there is no reason why he should not win a flock of battles.

Tony Palazolo paraded into the sporting department today and made the following statement:

"Paul Doyle is ready for action once more. His injured hand is right, while he has completely recovered from the cold that handicapped his work in his conflict with Eddie Shevlin.

* * *

"Doyle, as usual, isn't going to devote any of his times digging up opponents from the pugilistic graveyard. He wants the world to know he desires action with regular, two-listed fighting men.

I am prepared to post $500 with the Boston American to bind a bout between Doyle and either Mickey Walker or Eddie Shevlin. Doyle, a 140-pound fighter, is willing to give away five pounds to either of these men, but he won't meet them if they desire to enter the ring as middleweights.

* * *

"Nick Kline, Newark promoter, has wired me an offer for a Walker-Doyle bout. I prefer, however, to have such a match staged in Boston or New York.

"If Shevlin is ready to quarrel right more, he may have an assignment with Jack Delaney. We can get down to cases with Walker.

* * *

"You might also let your readers know that Jimmy White is training once more. He'll be ready to hop right into the middle of the pugilistic whirlpool as soon as some promoter secures a suitable opponent for him. This is not the easiest thing in the world to accomplish as White possesses about 100 per cent. of that kind of fighting stuff that has a kick in it."

* * *

Eddie Mack is back on the job once more. He fired the opening shot for his new campaign by dictating the following to one of his numerous secretaries:

"Willie Harmon, the satisfactory Dorchester lightweight who has won his last five starts in sterling style, has been matched today to do battle on Friday night with Tracy Ferguson of Hartford, Ct., at the Lake A. C. of Worcester for ten rounds. He was also matched to swap punches with Tommy Flanagan of Augusta, Me., on the night of February 27 over the ten round route.

"Abe Friedman, the New England bantamweight champion, received an offer from Philadelphia, to box Midget Smith at the Olympia A. A. on the night of February 20. Pete Moran, who is making the matches for the new town club in the absence of Herman Taylor, made me a flattering offer. If Harry Neary, manager of the Midget and myself can come to some agreement on the weight, these two slashing bantamweights will box the windup at the Olympia A. A. a week from Monday night.

* * *

"Friedman has started in light training, and will be in prime shape to box any bantamweight in the country in eight days. Matchmaker Bill Brophy of the Carlyle A. A. is after Friedman to box Tommy Reagan or Paddy Owens at his club in a couple of weeks.

MEDFORD AND COMMERCE IN INDOOR MEET AT EAST ARMORY

By FRED C. LANE.

The remaining days this week will be busy ones for the boys of Greater Boston high schools. More track meets are crowded into the next three days than took place all season. All the thrills that accompany close competition are in store for the sport followers.

Foremost among the meets is the Medford-Commerce quarrel, which takes place at the East Armory today. This is really the biggest school dual meet that has taken place this Winter, and why it should be held in conflict with the Triangular affair among Brighton, Charlestown and Hyde Park on the same day and place is one of the unsolved mysteries of public school athletics.

The intermediate and junior events between Medford and Commerce have been rated. The contest is sure to be a

* * *

The feature event will be the 600-yard run, which brings together Captain Joe Kelley of Medford, Paul Hanley and Barney Nolan of Commerce.

* * *

Judging from their performances at the recent B. A. A. games, better time than 1m. 20s. should be made. Kelley is favored to win, because of his past performances at the distance. He has had weak opposition from the school boy, of Greater Boston at this distance.

The record may be broken. Hanley and Nolan finished well in the 440 yard event, with a thirty-yard handicap, at the B. A. A. games.

Kelley went a little out of his class in competing in the 1,000-yard school boy run, but capture of second place branded him as an able performer at all middle distances.

* * *

Hyde Park should have little trouble vanquishing both Brighton and Charlestown in the triangular meet. After the frammng that Coach Daley's team gave Mechanic Arts and West Roxbury, both comparatively strong teams, neither Brighton nor Charlestown should prove to be hard obstacles. The Hyde Park school has a fine lot of interested aides and juniors, who should carry off many first prizes in their division.

* * *

The usual large crowd is looked for at the annual Latin School Dorchester High meet, which will take place at the East Armory on Friday. The Dorchester School is well fortified with seniors, but lacks the necessary juniors and intermediates to hold their own with the leading high schools of the city.

Just what causes such a lack of interest in sports at Dorchester is a puzzle. The school has approximately 1,500 boys, the majority of whom are eligible to run.

Huntington School athletes, after two weeks of inactivity, will show their wares to the M. I. T. freshmen on Friday. The Engineers are not boasting to any extent of their track team, but issue a warning not to hold them too cheaply.

The Back Bay school has sufficient talent to win over any of the high or prep schools in this State. The squad is not as large as in former years, but those on the team are usually point scorers in their events.

* * *

Melrose and Ringe meet at the Arena in a scheduled Greater Boston ice hockey game. The Melrose team should win by a large score if it shakes in the same form displayed against Exeter last week.

* * *

The Malden track team will go to Lynn on Friday evening to do battle with Lynn Classical. Coach McDonald, who has had the squad working out daily on the Cutler Gym floor, has a big improvement in the lads carrying Malden colors. Even an early season index easy for the Shoe City team. The Malden track team is not showing the form displayed by the hockey team.

The Spring weather of the past few days has fanned the baseball fever. In the next few days the battery candidates of Peabody High will be called out for training at the gymnasium. Coach Donovan was successful on the diamond last year and hopes to experience the same good fortune with this year's nine.

MIDDLESEX TEAM WILL PLAY BROOKLINE HIGH

The Middlesex School hockey team will play with Brookline High this afternoon.

The lineup will be as follows:

PENN BASEBALL MEN PLAN OUTDOOR PRACTICE

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—Outdoor practice for baseball candidates of Pennsylvania baseball team will start next Tuesday, weather permitting. It is the first season in many years, Coach Carlos said, that the pitchers and catchers have had no indoor work, its plans to start the whole squad together on Franklin Field.

BASEBALL MAGNATES GATHER AT CAPITAL

Washington, Feb. 8.—This city extended the hand of welcome to baseball magnates of the American League today for their first meeting outside of New York or Chicago in the history of the organization.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Club, had arranged for the club owners and officials to pay their respects to President Harding at the White House before beginning the business later in the day.

The meeting was called for the specific purpose of ratifying the 152 playing schedule, but it was learned it would not adjourn without some discussion of plans for effecting reorganization of the draft, now opposed by several of the minor leagues.

Many rumors of impending trades and purchases for which the baseball moguls would afford opportunity for quick negotiation also came to town with the magnates.

The only one of which they appeared to be aware, however, involved the New York and Detroit clubs, and even this was wholly conjectural as to the probable players involved.

The local club president indicated today that he would endeavor to have the magnates take a definite stand on the draft question at the present meeting. Discussing the opposition among the minors to the selection system, Griffith declared:

Somebody is going to get a second best in this controversy and it isn't going to be the majors or organized baseball."

CALZA SURE HE WILL BEAT KAVAROS

Italian Champion Confident He Can Throw Greek Heavyweight Wrestler

Everything is in readiness for the big wrestling bouts at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night and George Calza, known as the twenty-one-year-old champion, and the challenger of Renato Gardini, will lock arms with Gus Kavaros, the Greek heavyweight, who feels sure that Calza, who has never been defeated, will have his shoulders pinned to the mat.

Both men saw service in the big war and Calza won his title of Italian champion in Florence some time ago. Kavaros will outweigh Calza by fifteen pounds, but the speed of the champion is expected to nullify this.

Everything points to a packed house for the big event which is one of the best of the year.

Another bout that is sure to attract interest will be that in which Frank Lurick of Cambridge will meet Paul Bowser. Harry Mamas will meet Adolph Marshall of Brunswick, Me., in the opening bout.

Dan Avery, who looks after the interests of Lurick, declares his matstar is in perfect shape and will give Bowser the surprise of his life.

MEDBURY

Says There Are Other Ways You Can Show Your Wife You Love Her Besides Beating Her Up

According to statistics, cave men will soon be a thing of the past. Husbands who beat up their wives become monotonous.

A woman wouldn't mind being dragged around by her curls if it didn't spoil her hair net.

There are other ways you can show a wife you love her besides beating her up.

In the olden days, couples used to live in caves. We live in worse places today, only they call them apartments.

Statistics say that women are becoming to like men who are kind and gentle. Bibl, if you get rough with your wife she gets sore, and if you treat her nice she gets suspicious.

One guy was so lovely to his wife she had him arrested.

She told the judge that since he started being good to her, life with him was unbearable.

He used to fight with her every night, but when he skipped a couple of days she thought he was becoming lax.

She said he was either losing his interest or his pep.

She claimed he was a wonderful husband in the Summer, because when it was hot he always knocked her cold.

Another woman took her husband to a specialist, and told the doctor her husband was losing his memory, because he only called her half as many names as he used to.

The husband not only promised to call her 3ll the names again, but even took up golf so he could learn a few more.

He had begun to treat her with so much respect that she almost divorced him.

She didn't want to fight, but neither did she want to be ignored.

Reformers say it's wrong for a man to beat his own wife. It isn't proper for him to beat any other man's wife, either.

But there are no such things as wife beaters. In the olden days, men who beat their wives were in the minority. Men who try to beat their wives today are in the hospital.

A man tells you he is going home to beat his wife, and then you don't see him for a week. You never find out whether he succeeded or not because they won't let you in the hospital to talk to him.

MOVE TO STRAIGHTEN OUT SKATING RECORDS

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Julian T. Fitzgerald of Chicago, newly-elected president of the International Skating Union of America, announced today that he intends to work for a complete and systematic revision of all United States and Canadian skating records.

The undertaking would start, he said, with the Lake Placid diamond skate championship here Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Arrangements have been made by the president to have the time in each event taken with the utmost care.

"At the close of the present skating season," said President Fitzgerald, "I propose to call a meeting of the board of control of the International Skating Union and at that time take up in detail this whole matter of amateur skating.

"The job is no small one and I imagine it will be turned over to a special committee whose duty it would be to take up each present so called added speed skating record, obtain all possible data as to the conditions under which it was skated.

"With this information in hand the board should be able to rule whether a record is or is not official and entitled to consideration as the basis of any record at the same distance.

"It is my ambition to start the skating season of 1923 with an absolutely clean slate as far as these amateur speed skating records are concerned."

DILBOY POST HOLDS AMATEUR TOURNAMENT

Extra seats have been provided in the hall as the advance sale of ticket matches a capacity house. Extra reserve has been promised by the El Paso Club for those coming from out of town.

Kelley went a little out of his class in competing in the 1,000-yard school boy run, but capture of second place branded him as an able performer at all middle distances.

ONLY PIN FALLS WILL COUNT ON MONDAY

Lewis-Davisconrt Match Not for Decision on Rolling or Flying Falls

Pinfalls only will count in each of the three matches making up the final star card for the wrestling carnival in Mechanics Building Monday night. Promoter Tuohey is firmer than ever for this method of scoring after seeing the manner in which the contests are held under the rules of the New York State Commission which permits "rolling" and "flying" falls.

Monday night's program here gives every promise of being one of the best bills the fans have ever seen. Davis' art and Lewis are ideally matched in every respect, and now that Dick has become accustomed to the hooting and climate he too will start moving upward.

With London against Polk and Waldek Zbyszko against Gerstman in the other numbers it looks like a great night for the followers of the ancient game.

And Then Things Changed and He Asserted Himself and the Wife Became the Wife of a Famous Husband to the Amazement of Both

By F. H. Sweet

BECKWOOD STETSON paused a moment at the hotel entrance to draw on his gloves, then started across the street. The opera house was nearly opposite, and the stream of people that had been turning in to it for the last half hour was beginning to thin.

The curtain should go up in a few minutes now, and she was in the first act. It did not matter that he had seen her for ten nights in succession, from the raising of the curtain to her final appearance in front of it to acknowledge the enthusiastic encores of the audience, the eleventh would be just as fresh and absorbing. And besides, this was to be her last night. On the morrow the company would start on a starring tour through the West for the rest of the season.

As he went by the poster he turned for a lingering second to the names which already he had read a hundred times from his window across the street. It was the leading attraction on the poster and the eleven days' enthusiasm of the public had conceded its right to be there

Her Ambition

At last Beryl Kildare had won her ambition, and it was even more complete than she could have hoped. His eyes grew tender as they lingered upon the name; the ambition had been won nobly, through long years of hard work

Two girls passed him, and he heard one of them whisper "That is Beryl Kildare's husband." His eyes grew yet more tender. Yes Beryl had won her ambition, and he had won Beryl and though they had been married three years the joy of it was just as much of a marvel as when he had first gained her consent. Twelve hours since morning he had heard the phrase, "Beryl Kildare's husband," and the words had brought nothing but pride in her success, and not she and her success were his

The first shock came when he went inside. Two men were in front of the ticket window. When they turned he recognized one as a member of his football team at college, the other had been a reporter on a Western paper where he had worked for two years after he obtained his degree. They both came forward with extended hands

"Well, this is good!" they ex claimed in a breath, and one of them added: "What have you been doing with yourself all these years, Beck, old fellow? We expected your name would be blazing across the continent long ago. You were a chap who gave that sort of impression, you know. And—well, what have you been doing?"

Beckwood warned a little. At college people had turned to look at him and had repeated his name to one another. If they had predicted that the name of Beckwood Stetson would some time be better known.

Plenty of Honor

"Oh, I beg your pardon." one of the men broke in gayly, "we haven't congratulated you yet, and that should have come first. You're a lucky chap, Beck. Its honor enough for one poor mortal to be Beryl Kildare's husband"

"So I think," heartily. "And I want to introduce you to her after the play. Suppose you come over to the hotel and have an after-the-theatre supper with us. As to what I have been doing my father turned his shoe and leather business over to me and since I graduated college I've been buried in the office. But suppose we go in."

Several times during the evening Beckwood's glasses swerve from the stage toward him, and heads come together behind their whisperings, and he knew that all the honor of the star. He had seen the same thing evenings before and again he was in the city for four days but didn't call on me, although he called me on the telephone one evening when I was not at home

Do you think I should think seriously of that young man and should I answer his letters should he write me again" While he was here for the short time he had time to call on all his men friends MILDRED S

POSSIBLY business complications make it impossible for the young man to consider marriage just now. Pride may make it impossible for him to speak to you frankly and he may take the simplest way out of the difficulty by avoiding you If he writes, answer in the same friendly, impersonal spirit, you find in his letters

Breaking A Friendship

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have not heard from or seen my sweetheart for six weeks and I am heartbroken, as I cannot understand his silence.

Don't you think an honorable man, if he had intentions of breaking relations after going with me for a year, would tell me instead of keeping me in suspense?

I don't see how anybody can just simply cast a person off and think nothing of it I know I will feel this for a long, long time, and will never trust a man again INEZ.

DON'T jump to conclusions. How do you know your sweetheart is not ill? How do you know he hasn't written to you and had the bad fortune to have his letter go astray? How do you know he isn't in financial difficulties or trouble of such a sort that he feels the fairest thing to do is to give you a chance to forget a man who has gone quietly out of your life? Write the young man a calm, friendly letter and tell him you cant understand his silence.

for the first time began to cloud his mind He was a strong man, and had dreamed dreams Ought he not to make sure for her instead of being content to snare that which she had so hardly earned?

The next morning he bade her goodby for three months, and went through Chicago to his show and leather office It was now a good time The papers could look after the business He would throw himself into the thing of which he had dreamed, with his full strength, and do what I have he could do When she returned, the glory of it should be hers

Both of his friends were now on a Western syndicate of newspapers, and soon they began to see paragraphs that made them look proud and thankful

Look out, Al," exclaimed the reporter man one day, as he raised his gaze from an item, "do you suppose what he said in the theatre that evening had anything to do with his starting in" He wasn't on to Beck, he turned in the show and I couldn't imagine why, you know"

Certainly not, of course Beck is too strong a man not to depend of himself when ready What little you and I might say wouldn't matter But this thing of his is rather a credit, don't you think Although it will have a name across the continent, I believe one of us hoped for him."

"Well, isn't that enough? What more can anyone ask than to have his name in everybody's mouth, and for doing worthwhile work, even though some ridicule be attached to the notoriety?"

Fame of His Own

Stray items and comments, and then whole columns, in the newspapers also reached the starring troupe bringing gladness and pride into the eyes of the leading actress, and, in time, speculation into the ones of her manager. When the company returned to its own city for four last performances were to be given to end the season and posters were but a week in advance.

Beckwood returned the night before, his face strong with satisfied power and accomplishment. But the next morning, when he went to the window, as he had been accustomed to do, and gazed across at the poster in front of the opera house the satisfied look suddenly gave way to one of consternation and then to bitter self-approach.

"Oh, Beryl" Beryl" he groaned, "have I robbed you of all the laurels of your years of hard work," here no dear I did not dream of this But it shall be only for a short time I will go back to my shop and leather, and then the public will forget and you will come back into your own"

For the time on the poster across the street was "Beckwood Stetson's Wife"

LITTLE maid—and woman-grown—the unwise and the one versed in the labyrinth of Love's winding ways—has since Cleopatra turned compelling eyes on Antony and tried to keep him always by her side in unambitious dreaming (and before and since)—from ALL times until now, woman clips the wings of Eros—thinking this will hold him fast—(CONTENT)

But, oh, it doesn't—not ever work! Love with clipped wings develops the mad yearning to sneak! If he can't fly the fence, he'll crawl under, even if he never dreamed of leaving before. For Love will go his way, mind you—whatever you do. His dreams come from nowhere, made of the fragile gold of his mind! In ardor he clings close to your heart, content to let the world go spinning past. If he saunters out to clear his brain of dreams and mix in common things for a little while, if his heart is yours, he will sail back to dream again and eat your salt.

But don't clip his wings! For the best Danny that ever was, who never dreamed any more than to look through the knothole of his fence, will grow a mad desire to get away. He'll burrow out if he can't skin the wall!

PICKING GOOD BOOKS

COMMITTEE OF PARENTS ACTS

By W. A Mckeever.

WHO will help to make the thousands of book stalls, now found in all our cities, to serve a high purpose in the lives of youth? In a little city of Illinois it has just been discovered that the young people are patronizing the street book stalls extensively four to one as compared with the local library A committee of parents of this place has taken up the matter and by and cooperatively Their methods are well worthy of summarizing for the benefit of the committees at large

Begin with the idea of co operating with the book and magazine dealer He will manifest a desire to make his business serve you as well as profitable, and it can be made both under right conditions

The committee obtains the dealers promise not to offer over his entire list of both books and magazines and to guard carefully all that is unclean, with no license to youthful reading matter The committee also secures a copy of the publication entirely. Each month there is submitted a list marked A as desirable materials, which he does not but should carry in his stock.

Under the agreement soon as June opens the dealer is glad to see out his cheaper tales and to stock up with the better ones As a direct incentive to her doing it a good part of the committee will gladly recommend some of his best materials. Thus he should enjoy an increase in both profit and self respect

Since coming upon this significant matter I have taken occasion to inquire into the status of a number of street literature stands and I find that the situation merely "grew up," subject to certain loose laws of supply and demand. The dealer watches pretty closely the variations of supply and demand and orders whatever he can sell

It is an old, old story, as The people are the arbiters If they let such a business as selling literature to their young merely "grow up," it is just as likely to grow up bad as good, and perhaps more so. Even corn will not grow up good if we let it be well tended. Why should the book business?

The only significant point to this discussion is that the friends of the boys and girls can easily influence the quality of the literature which falls into their youthful hands if these parents and teachers will simply apply themselves to the task

They have carefully managing the quality of the books which come into the public library. If this is accounted for perhaps better than one fourth of the reading matter in use among the young generation Let them now appeal to the dealer and make him a sort of non official librarian, as suggested above

RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL

Mrs. Hollingshead Summons Adelaide From Her Sleep to Tell Her of Her Worries About Patty

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

(Copyright, 1922, by Star Company.)

"I'LL tell you how it was," she said hurriedly, conscious that her charge was waiting for her shawl. "I did not expect to go out. Your father came to see Dr. Carter was here. The doctor said I must get more fresh air. Your father offered to sit with your mother while I went home. I was halfway this house as the doctor left. He kindly offered to give me a lift to my home. He did. That is all."

Making Up to Her

She was amazed when Richard broke into a noiseless laugh.

"It's a fact, that specialist!" he exclaimed. "Advises a pretty girl to go out for fresh air just at the time that he himself is driving away from the place where she is stopping! Who brought you home?"

"I told you I walked home!" she declared. "I am not in the habit of lying."

"Whew!" Dick whistled. "Don't get so mad! I was only wondering if I would have had a chance if I had happened along in the doctor's wake?"

"No!" she said sharply. "For you were otherwise engaged."

"That is the second time you have reminded me that I had a gay chicken with me this afternoon," he protested. "But, honestly, I would rather have had you."

"See here, Miss Adile," dropping his voice to a low and confidential pitch, "there is no reason why you and I should not go off for an occasional drive; is there?"

"I am here to stay with your mother," the girl reminded him.

"She need never know," he affirmed. "I do not suppose that she knows that you were with me for precious specialist this afternoon, does she?"

As she did not reply he chuckled and released her.

"That's all right!" he murmured. "You and I will talk all this over on some future occasion."

Looking back at the first Sunday night in the Hollingshead home it seemed to Adelaide Brown that this was the point at which she became suddenly acquainted with the peculiarities of the family employing her. This evening she sat with Mrs. Hollingshead until the invalid was ready to go to bed.

Two hours after Adelaide herself had fallen asleep the bell connecting with Mrs. Hollingshead's bedroom rang. This was the first time that it had ever summoned her at night.

"What is it, dear?" she asked the invalid as she entered her room

"Shut the door!" the blind woman directed. "You'll wake my husband! You know his room is right across the hall. I could have rung for Estelle. But I could not speak of what is troubling me to a mere servant. Addie, I am worried about Patty!"

"Why?" the girl questioned gently.

"Sit here on the bed by me," was the command. "Now listen. I am sure Patty is not in yet. I have not heard her come in."

Adelaide was at a loss what to say. "But," she ventured, "you know that Miss Patricia is with friends. She will be all right."

"But I don't know her friends. Is Richard in?"

"I do not know"

"Well, please find out. I want you to go softly to Patty's room and if she is not there go and wake Dick as if you were worried yourself about Patty. See?"

An Uncomfortable Moment.

"Oh, Mrs. Hollingshead; I cannot do that!" the girl demurred "Your son would think me most officious. Let me call him or Mr. Hollingshead to come to you"

"No! You shall not! I have gone through all that before. Henry would be furious with the children and say awful things to them, and they would threaten all kinds of things—and I would be wild with fear when I want to go off somewhere else to live.

"And if you told Dick that I was worried about Patty he would be angry with me—and, oh, I am so m serable!"

She began to sob and the pitying girl put her arms about her. She recalled Dr. Carter's words. The patient must be soothed and kept quiet.

"If you will lie still until I return," she promised, "I will find out if your daughter is in. That is the first thing to do, isn't it?"

"Yes," the woman quavered. "I suppose it" is. Please go and see now!"

FOR BABY'S NURSERY

—By Loretto C. Lynch—

HAVE you ever thought that it is a great strain on the young baby to be in constant and close contact with the older members of the family? And do you realize the necessity of space for a nursery?

If the house is old, the room selected for the nursery should be thoroughly scrubbed, freshly papered and painted. The walls may be painted or covered with waterproof wall paper, which can be wiped off with a damp cloth. No article of furniture should come into the nursery unless it can be washed. A bare floor may easily be kept clean. Hard woods are preferable since they do not splinter, but a soft-wood floor, painted or varnished, will do very well.

Linoleum may be used on an old floor as it is easily cleaned. Waashable rugs may be used, but heavy mats or carpets are not suitable for a nursery.

When the baby is large enough to sit on the floor to play, a heavy blanket folded or even a clean comfort may be used as a mat. This is most important in Winter when there are cold floor drafts. A play pen with a raised floor is a great convenience.

Everything not actually needed for the care of the baby should be eliminated. If old furniture is used it may be painted with light, washable paints. Upholstered furniture, heavy draperies, or covers, because they harbor germs, are unsuitable.

Among the essentials are a bed, and bed furnishings. A sectional bookcase for storing clothing, and toilet articles is much more to be desired than a bureau or chest of drawers. The piles of garments in the bookcase may be seen at a glance. Then there should be one or two low chairs. The nursery should contain a baby equipment and a baby's department. A bed or couch for the mother or nurse may be placed in the nursery if she must sleep in the room. Every nursery should have a wall thermometer. There should be a low chair without arms for the mother when nursing the baby.

TO PROLONG LIFE

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

MOST of the deaths from pneumonia, heart disease and tuberculosis which occur every year are either avoidable, or deferrable.

Cleanliness, fresh air, good food and observance of the elementary laws of personal hygiene largely abate sickness and pestilence

If the body is reasonably healthy the germs of disease has but little chance to cause mischief.

If the following principles are kept in mind, the public health will be promoted and preserved and the foundation laid for progress, efficiency, prosperity and happiness.

Avoid drowsiness tending to lower vitality, thus encouraging infection.

Be moderate in all things, especially in the matter of foods and drinks

Cultivate regular habits.

Get eight hours sleep every day.

Observe the laws of personal hygiene.

Go outdoors as much as possible.

Insure the ventilation of the home, the office and the workshop.

Avoid overcrowded gatherings and all places of assembly which are poorly ventilated.

To clean a white wool jersey the following method is splendid Buy a small quantity of calcined magnesia from your druggist and mix it with water till it is of the thickness of cream. Apply this to the jersey with a cloth rag, and let it remain on for a couple of days Then brush out thoroughly and the jersey should be quite clean and free.

The first, essential in washing gloves is to use a good soap—preferably one rich in fats. The gloves should be washed upon the hands in lukewarm water—hot water disintegrates the dressing of the leather and impoverishes the gloves. Hard rubbing should be avoided. When clean, rinse in fresh lukewarm water, but do not change all the soap out. Above all, do not attempt to dry your gloves quickly and avoid placing them near a fire. Partly remove the moisture with a towel, and let them finish drying gradually in the open air for preference or in a warm room. When dry draw the gloves through the hands gently to soften them.

It has been proved that a solution of boyonia brew will often take out iron-mould stains better than anything else. Simmer begonia leaves in water until a solution of a dark green color is obtained. Rub this solution when cold on the patch of iron-mould and leave the garment for five minutes. Then rinse in clear water and expose the material to the sun. If one application does not bring the desired result the process should be repeated.

A conjuror was producing eggs from a silk hat. He addressed a boy in the front row. "Your mother can't get eggs without hens, can she?" he asked. "Oh, yes," said the boy. "How's that?" asked the conjuror. "She keeps ducks," answered the boy.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is only a close second. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid getting wet feet and chill, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is absorbed in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly weather, while the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and all called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate from the body elimination the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Advertisement.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Feb. 8.—The administration appears to be failing into disfavor in various important directions.

* * *

This column is not political. It deals with politics only in so far as politics affects business.

Therefore, what is here set down is intended, not as criticism, but as an unbiased outline of what seems to be taking place, since it very directly affects business consideration and calculations.

* * *

Frankly, when President Harding won the presidency there was a widespread feeling that his administration would be altogether too favorable to the business interests to satisfy a very large section of our population. A common comment was, "the old guard is again to enter the saddle."

Now, as a matter of fact, the administration has disappointed not a few business men.

Taxation evils were not grasped and pulled up by the roots, many business men complain. Nothing like the measure of relief hoped for has been forthcoming.

The administration's handling of the tariff has apparently failed to create any general satisfaction.

The conduct of Congress in regard to soldier bonus legislation is exciting bitter comment in Republican circles here and, of course, the ex-service men and many others, favoring the bonus, have been equally dissatisfied.

Then, too, the unexplained delay in reaching a friendly basis with Mexico has proved galling to the business world, since it has been confidently hoped that by now a full measure of business would be passing between this country and our southern neighbor, now evidently on the mend in a reasonably satisfactory pace.

Our vast farming population has felt very bitterly over what has overtaken them and, not unnaturally, the disposition has been to regard this government as partly to blame. The formation of the agricultural bloc and the success of its activities have been, in a sense, an outcome of the farmers' dissatisfaction with the way things were being handled at Washington. Our farmers—not wholly logically—hold the administration responsible for the deflation movement inaugurated by the Federal Reserve Board. Then, more recently, President Harding's slap at the agricultural bloc, injected into his speech at the opening of the recent agricultural conference, has not endeared the administration to the agricultural bloc.

* * *

Then, at no stage has labor looked upon the present administration as friendly to it. The stand taken by the administration in the railway strike was threatened embittered a large section of the labor class. Failing to get by the Railroad Labor Board in regard both to wages and working agreement's have been influenced to some extent in line with the administration's general policy. That the government had no more in mind in helping the Railroad Labor Board's decision than to assist Samuel Gompers had, did not prevent the feeling from becoming widespread in labor circles.

* * *

The government's wabbling over the widely-championed sales tax has satisfied neither the advocates nor the opponents of this plan.

* * *

President Harding's course in connection with international "entanglements" has drawn forth criticism alike from out-and-out converts to the League of Nations and those who are uncompromisingly opposed to our having anything whatsoever to do with the affairs or quarrels of any kind with foreign powers.

* * *

Of course, the basic cause of much of the dissatisfaction which Big Business is the hard times, which practically every class in the country have been experiencing. It is a proverbial that the administration is always blamed when acute depression occurs no matter whether the actions of the administration have anything whatsoever to do with causing the depression or not. Heading the past presidential campaign not a few Republican spokesmen held out hopes, not to say promises, that the election of Harding would mean the prompt return of prosperity. Even had Solomon been elected to the White House last March, the country could not have been saved from undergoing some of what it has undergone. But men out of work, men whose wages have been reduced, men whose investments have shrunk, men whose balance sheets show not profits but losses, are not disposed to make philosophically and to judge calmly and accurately as to how far or how little the administration is responsible for their hardships.

* * *

Significant elections will soon be coming along. Their results will merit the closest scrutiny of every responsible citizen.

* * *

This is not an attempt to assess the wisdom or the lack of wisdom exercised by the present administration, nor an attempt to recommend to the administration what it ought to do or not to do to meet the conditions which have arisen.

It is, however, an earnest, unprejudiced effort to outline what appears to have been happening.

If this diagnosis is sufficiently accurate, it warrants very serious thought.

Stocks Close Weak in New York; Money 5½%; Sterling Exchange at New Hig

RISE IN CALL RATE CAUSES REACTION

Rails Were Midday Features; Studebaker Led Motors Upward

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

There was a reaction on the New York Exchange when the call rate was advanced to 5½ per cent. late in the session and the market closed weak. Some rails and most motors retained part of their gains, however. The worst level was reached in the last hour and trading was active on the decline. It approximated 700,000 shares for the day. In the afternoon demand sterling was quoted as high as $4.53½. Losses did not much exceed a point. Gains were fractional as a rule.

During the second hour Studebaker was a feature and led motors upward while rails retained their strong tone. Buying of St. Paul preferred by a well-known specialist, who had just appeared before on the floor of the stock exchange for a long period, set up several points. National Lead was weak because of official denial that the company's dividend would be increased. Low-priced rails were in more demand than for some time Bumblebee stocks were highest in more than a year. Chandler was another strong motor. The upward movement continued into the afternoon. Call money opened at 5 per cent. yielded soon at 4½ per cent. and reported. Foreign exchange had a strong start and during the morning demand sterling advanced to $4.53. This is a new high for the present movement.

HAD A MIXED OPENING.

The market had a mixed opening and the early trend was downward. Weakness characterized the list at the end of thirty minutes. There was short selling at the start, bears taking courage from reactionary tendencies which developed yesterday. But recent declines were fractional. Feeling restricted about all of the bullish influence, but this was concentrated upon a few stocks, after opening unchanged, U. S. Food Products, against which bankruptcy proceedings have been instituted, dropped three points to a new record low price. American Sumatra, another "war baby," also fell to its low on the Curb. Adams Express was strong on rumors of another cash distribution soon. The Fisher people made a good gain, but American Express receded. Issues to fall a point or more during the day included Famous Players, United Fruit and National Enameling. A number of stocks sold to reflected indecision.

WAITING FOR LOWER RATE.

The call rate continues around 5 per cent. and some traders who would be disposed to take on a line of money were cheaper are awaiting the reductions which are predicted. Funds are said to be accumulating in the West and other centres and the monetary situation is reported as much improved in the West and South. This is indicated by rising reserve ratios in those sections. Business conditions have been greatly reduced and the present borrowing demand is far from embarrassing banks. In fact, this country's cash capital is much in excess of current requirements. This ought to cause a greater demand for sound securities than is being felt. But investors were never more timid than now.

STOCK EXCHANGE SHOULD AUDIT ITS MEMBERS

Chicago Clearing House Plan Is Urged as Due to Public

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—The recent suggestion that the New York Stock Exchange establish a system similar to the clearing house examinations of Chicago banks to determine the financial condition of its members has taken a strong hold in influential quarters and something will probably come of it before long.

The New York Stock Exchange has had a committee of inquiry working in this city and, while that committee says that the situation here is in good sound, evidently the propriety, even the necessity, of some device which will be in operation all the time, has impressed itself on members of that organization.

Chicago bankers are talking strongly in favor of it, not only for the great Eastern centre of finance, but for the Chicago Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade.

EXAMINER NEEDED.

The New York committee of inquiry is a good avenue through which to put this into effect. Having found no serious spots here, as is evidenced by recent happenings, and the fact that there is no reason in the future for unsecure or unbusinesslike performances among members of the exchange.

It is of little use to the future of the trade to discover these things after the mischief has been done, and it argues great laxity on the part of the eastern institution, so severe in some lines of its discipline, that its officials knew nothing of the weakness of certain houses when many a man on the street in Chicago was well aware of it.

The thing needed is an examiner with an adequate corps of assistants who will investigate the affairs of each member firm every stock exchange or similar body at least once a year and report to the governing committee just as the examiner goes to the committee of the Chicago Clearing House.

The plan worked extremely well in Chicago, and has prevented many an unbusinesslike practice from being followed by a competitor. In addition to this plan there is a host of brilliant success, and has been adopted in other cities of the United States.

An occasional examination by a committee known not to be permanently connected with the exchange, but by the exchange itself, is the other hand, a danger, for it is a danger suggested that there is something wrong. If it is the regular thing, no more notice would be taken of it than of the examinations of banks by the State or the federal authorities which are constantly going on.

NEW YORK BEHIND TIMES.

The New York Stock Exchange is a thing of the past. It is behind many one of the days when many corporations never thought of such a thing as having an audit, much less an expert. Nowadays any corporation that amounts to much not only does but publishes its condition to the world, usually with a certificate by some known auditor.

It is not necessary or desirable that any report should be made outside the Board of Governors of the Exchange as to the financial status of one of its members, but the public would have no right to the information. The audience of the exchange and the subpoena of its books so that everything is in good shape.

That is not the case at the present time. Membership in the New York Stock Exchange, the Chicago Stock Exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade or any other well known trading concern should be a certificate of character and financial strength.

These bodies have their reputation at stake, and a large percentage of our population are now suspicious of that reputation. Many people are not familiar with the business, and not knowing of the average high character of the members of the exchanges wonders if it is safe to trust any of the members, and yet there are many wrongs in some members, and yet there is enough dross along with the gold to cause distrust.

The dangers in investment and speculation are great enough without any one being run who is not worthy to set form the function of handling the cash and securities of customers. A thorough examination system would serve to eliminate brokers who are doing business in an unbusinesslike or illegal way.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Stocks showed well maintained activity Tuesday with the volume, however, somewhat less than that of Monday. There were numerous features of strength and some new high levels, but to some keen observers it looked as if the distributing process in certain recently active issues was fairly well under way. Gains of one to two points were registered by a few specialties, chief among which were Gulf States Steel, Studebaker, Mexican Pete and Republic. Great Northern Ore moved up to a new high level for the present movement, but receded under profit taking. General Asphalt at its high level was more than eight points above its recent low level. This stock also reacted in the late trading.

DISTRIBUTION, if in fact such a process was under way, was facilitated by the more favorable interpretation placed upon the bonus outlook. It was assumed,

$1,000 PLUM IS AWAITING SOME "GO-GETTER"

Enrollment blanks for the $5,000 Famous Titles Test—now in the hands of those who took part in the Book Test—must be in this office three weeks from today.

Send all your enrollments in at one time.

Remember that all that your friends are asked to do is first, declare their intention to take part in the Famous Titles Test, start in the Test on Wednesday, March 1, and at its close send in a set of answers.

Only three weeks to go and $5,000 in cash waiting to be distributed among those who send in the largest numbers of New Contestants! For the largest list, $1,000; next largest, $750; next largest, $500. Other awards of $400, $300, $200, $150, $100 and $50. One hundred of $10 each; one hundred and ten of $5 each.

EASY MONEY FOR SOMEONE.

This is easy money. No one is expected to "sign up a whole town." You are not asked to "canvass for subscribers." Tell the folks about the fun and the great value of a Title Test. Explain how it attracts and holds YOU. Get their promise to take part. Then, the name and address.

One person's guess is as good as another's, but it appears reasonable to expect NO long lists. There isn't time, unless here and there an enthusiast or two, determined to BEAT DOWN THAT THOUSAND over everything else and go after it. Some "go-getter" can have the Big Plum if he will start.

Seems unreasonable to be compelled to tell you right now, before you have $5,000 to give away, but everything is topsy-turvy nowadays and it may be necessary. Remember one thing: The top award of $1,000 will be paid with equal promptness, even if the larg at number of New Contestants enrolled by anyone is no more than eleven. An! so of the other awards. The first newspaper was such a contest, so there is nothing to gauge it by. Two hundred and nineteen of you, whatever the result, MUST divide the money.

WHY LIMIT IS PLACED.

One reader of the Boston American who took part in an earlier test wants to know why the Membership Competition is limited to those who took part in the Book Test. For the reason that those are supposed to know the plan and theory of these entertainments and so are able to interest others.

ANY reader of the Boston American can take part in the $5,000 Famous Titles Test, which will begin on Wednesday, March 1. Only those who were in the Book Test are eligible in the Membership Competition, now under way.

It isn't likely that anyone will want more than the three installments in which they have been sent out, but those who want more can have them for the asking.

A very few short letters:

Dear Sir—I would like to see how much I have enjoyed the Title Tests. I have been a reader a long time, sometimes not the time well spent. I have a much better understanding of some books and I hope we may have more of them.

Mrs. C. E. Winthrop.

We are promised one more, immediately. Another letter are to follow depends upon the popularity of that one.

A FEW QUESTIONS.

Dear Test Editor—Just a few questions to provide a little amusement. Regard to Picture No. 36, "The Remains," is simply a matter of opinion, but I think about the title. The simple letter than "The Remains" is "Remains." Regarding Picture No. 37, "Wandering to Webster," a feast I see.

I was sailing along fine, twenty-two straight, when Picture No. 41 had me stumped, and no doubt, the best title, but if "The Hoarding of Hoarders" is correct to follow I don't see where the dictionary comes in.

I expect I am all wrong from now on and am waiting for "Idle and sad," "Lamentation over Misplaced Affection" to show up none of those selected by me. Have since 417 words and I must be the wrong way; I'm not sure, so why you bring on the test Tests.

Dear Test Editor—Thanks for your letter of the 26. I believe if all the contestants had one spokesman to represent them they might be inclined to vote a unanimous ballot requesting that the Titles be changed to "Famous Titles as the Editor sees them" and doing away with the announcement of the winners. The pleasure that lies in the announcements and editorials in this contest has created a feeling of friendship and a way of family round table, with Mr. Editor and Mr. Artist at the head of it. I wish to meet them face to face. All times is never and all places.

But "you'd scarce expect one of my age to speak in public on the stage," and another quotation which occurs to me, "It is all very well to dissemble your love, but why did you kick me down stairs?" Picture of both the Test Editor and Mr. Artist will come from time to time in the Test drawings.

Dear Mr. Test Editor—I fail to see how scores of the Titles are going to fit the pictures up to date. The titles are perfectly fitting for some pictures, but for the "pirate which is his also. If the question is now getting to mean "Titles as they mean" "Pirates" are shown in Picture No. 38. Otherwise I cannot see how I could consider the title a failure. Don't see how anyone could. GEORGE E.

There were two frogs, one feminist you out and the other up the yard a piece. Do you like "Marooning"?

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Florence A. H.—I should call that a good number. The Pictures Puzzle Editor has nothing to do with the Book Test.

N. A., Dorchester—The first minute I have any information about any standing in the Book Test I will print it here for you.

W. S. M.—I have received "stories" enough made up of titles to fill eight pages. Glad to see Monday. Thank you.

Correct Title—The Convict Ship

Correct Title—Old Curiosity Shop

Book Test Revealed

For more than twenty-five years the famous old Australian convict ship "Success" has been on exhibition in British and American seaports. The vessel has been written up in newspapers and magazines all over the world. The history of the "Success" as a convict ship dates back to the rush for the Australian gold fields in 1851. The ship was constructed in 1790 near Rangoon, in Burma. At last accounts she was in American waters.

All Christendom Greets Pius XI.

All the Christian world is glad that the new Pope, Pius XI., is a man strong of mentality, robust physically and exalted spiritually.

It is well that the new Pontiff possesses this threefold strength, for upon his shoulders rests a world-wide burden of responsibility.

It is reassuring, therefore, to know at this vital crisis in the affairs of the world, Christian and non-Christian, that the Pope is a man pre-eminently fitted for the duties of his high and holy office.

By experience, by training, by deep and continuous study and thought, Cardinal Ratti, Archbishop of Milan, had won for himself widespread fame even before the Sacred College elected him to the Pontificate.

It is safe to predict then that the wish of His Holiness, as expressed in his message through Cardinal O'Connell, for the love of America will be answered in full measure.

Already the people of this country, irrespective of creed, are ready to accord to him reverence for his learning and his piety, and to see in his elevation a long step toward healing the running sores left by the World War.

'Don't Live in Dress Suit Case'

That's the Wise Advice of John Francis Jones of the New Jersey Central

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

John Francis Jones, born in Petersburg, Va., is the porter on the first Pullman car that leaves Lakewood, N. J., bright and early in the morning for New York.

Well, the house I own in Jersey City isn't quite paid for, but I am past what they call "the danger mark." It cost me $3,000 eight years ago. It's worth more than twice that now. Yes sir, you feel better, you are better, and white folks think more of you when you own your own house and pay taxes. This here living in a dress suit case don't get you anywhere.

Some of the "white folks" might think that over, and not mere little white gentlemen that live in dress suit cases, but men far up near the top that make it as difficult as possible for the little man to get out of the dress suit case and into a home of his own.

John Francis Jones says, "People think more of you when you pay taxes, and do your share to keep things going."

So they do, probably. What is far more important: The citizen thinks more about his government, takes more interest in it, values its stability more higher when he is a taxpayer, and owns the roof that covers him.

The biggest men, who have climbed up to the top, want to stay there, keep what they have and get more, can find nothing better in the way of SAFETY AND INSURANCE than increasing the number of those that move out of a dress suit case and into a house that they own.

Instead of grafting on everything that goes into a house, from the cement in the cellar floor to the tub in the bathroom, it would be a good thing if business would make as cheap as possible the BUILDING of homes, and as numerous as possible the OWNERS of them.

This applies especially to modest houses, that cost from $5,000 down.

If those that control government would allow it to take as much interest in its own citizens IN PEACE as it takes in the citizens of other countries IN WAR, millions of Americans could move out of a dress suit case into a home of their own.

What do you suppose could be done in the way of home building with forty or fifty of the two hundred billion dollars that this country turned over in the course of the war?

If the thing can be done in war, why not in peace?

France and Sweden are the two most stable and really conservative countries in the world, the safest in the long run for the investment of big capital. In Sweden and in France PEOPLE DO NOT LIVE IN DRESS SUIT CASES.

More than six millions of French people are owners of French soil. And when you read the history of Charles the Twelfth admiring the terrific courage with which he fought, marching through Russia, and her vast armies, with only twelve thousand men, remember that every one of those twelve thousand men owned his own home in Sweden and intended to get back to it.

A safe government is one that means something to a majority of the men governed. Let the majority own part of the country and you may forget the much discussed "dangerous discontent."

Bright Spots Are Seen

But Not Too Many

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Here and there in this pleasant land are bright spots, even if international business does fall off thousands of millions at a time. Part of the time recently, if you wanted to gamble in stocks, you could borrow money at 3½ per cent.

Some stocks went up. But the joy did not reach as far as farms and plantations. Cotton was down again, wheat was lower. You can make several pair of shoes out of one ox hide, and yet the farmer says that he gets less for the hide of an ox than the price of a pair of shoes. That would make him do a great deal of thinking, if he had a great deal of time for thinking—which he hasn't.

Issue Against Lodge

If there are people who believe that they can defeat Senator Lodge by resurrecting the moribund corpse of the League of Nations and carrying it into the fight as their shibboleth, those foolish people have a great disappointment coming to them.

If it is desirable to make an international issue against Mr. Lodge, his participation in the Four-Power party treaty, in so far as it is a breach of his party pledge that we shall keep out of entangling alliances, would be a very much better issue.

Pershing and the War Scribes

By BERT FORD

GENERAL PERSHING was as carefree and gay as a "shavetail" lieutenant at the luncheon which he gave to the American war correspondents in Washington. He said he found genuine joy and relaxation in meeting the old gang, and he showed it.

He feared the war correspondents on the western front may have considered his censorship too rigid, but the correspondents knew that no army engaged in the World War had been more liberal than the A. E. F., both as to censorship and as to the personal freedom of the war writers to go where they pleased. In this there were no restrictions or barriers.

Back-of-the-scenes anecdotes were told by correspondents at the luncheon which greatly amused General Pershing. "Terrible Archie" Parke, formerly with the International News Service, spun this one:

"When the correspondents at the front learned that the late President Roosevelt had been engaged to write war articles for a syndicate in the States, we cabled him that we would be proud to make him an honorary member of the American War Correspondents' Club. Heywood Broun remarked 'If Teddy comes over, wonder how De-lighted will grow De-leted?'"

General Pershing fairly rocked with mirth over that thrust at his censorship. Then "Bob" Small of the Philadelphia Ledger, who was with the A. E. F. for the A. P., said:

"Here's another on you, General. There was a review back of the lines one day. You called a second 'too-ey' down pretty sharply. I happened to overhear his stage whisper. He said, 'That guy'll never be known as Pop Pershing.'"

"Splendid," said the General, chuckling. "That lad was a good forecaster."

MORALS AND MANNERS HAVE NO PLACE HERE

New British Writer's Home Is Free of All Conventional Restraints and He Makes Companions of Birds and Beasts

By HENRY WILLIAMSON

(Great Britain is chuckling over the crisp writings of a young man who is just "bobbing up" as an author. Here is a sample of the young author's new kind of work, which Universal Service readers will appreciate.)

LONDON, Feb. 8.—For me London was dead. It lay like a corpse by my side at night and kept me from sleep. It was killing me, the vile thing, with its breadth of river fog, its Piccadilly death-grin, its limbs crawling with those maggots of civilization—smoking trains, grinding buses and cabs blowing blue filth into the air. My doctor said, "You have not recovered from an adolescence in the war."

I replied, "Possibly. But three girls in succession have jilted me. I cannot get work, I have no money; and in spirit I am forever roaming my Devon hills, with the ravens and the wild hawks."

My literary friends said: "You haven't grown up yet; all these ideas of yours are but youthful vapors." My suburban neighbors said: "He is potty, y'know."

So I left the filthy place that is called London and walked, without money and unfriended and with a sprouting beard, to Devon.

Art of Living Discovered.

I have discovered the art of living; my life has the simplicity of the Greek ideal. My bed is made of sweetest bracken laid on springy poles of fir. I rent a cottage for four pounds a year. And I have many dear companions dwelling with me in my lime-washed hermitage. They love me and I love them.

They have no manners, and they snatch food from one another's mouth, but I don't care. Some of them eat uncooked mice; the favorite dish of a young lady is a live, slimy eel from the near brook. Two other females have been seen to rake over a neighboring dunghеap. One young man is, I fear a confirmed kleptomaniac, but so charming is he that when people from whom he has stolen come and tell me of it they invariably laugh and smoke his little head.

My home is a sanctuary for the crippled and those hiding from justice. I have four friends who dare not venture out in the daytime. Were they to do so they would be mobbed and followed by jeering crowds. So they leave at eventide. They are barn owls, foam-white of breast, and on their soft backs is laid a mantle of tarnished gold cloth. They are my brothers.

The young lady whose favorite dish consists of live eels is an otter cub. How I tamed her is another story. There are, indeed, a score of stories that I could tell. But who would print them? Editors' ideas are usually as dull as the river water by the Embankment—where for many nights I sat and made moans at that terrible thing—peace after war.

Some Queer Comrades

Perhaps the folks can appreciate a new writer. If editors care to give readers the opportunity of hearing a new voice, I will speak. If they like, they may tell people about my comrades, who are:

4 Beautiful Owls.
1 Wilful Otter Cub,
1 Cunning Carrion Crow (shot by a farmer, left for dead, and nursed back to life by myself —two outcasts together),
3 Lovely Spaniels,
2 Gentle Kittens,
1 Naughty Terring Gull (broken-winged; caught presumably by a wave crest),
1 Kleptomaniacal Jackdaw,
2 Scrounging Magpies,
1 Enormous Buzzard Hawk.

All living in harmony, with myself as the supreme adjudicator of any quarrel or argument.

"What a curious fellow he must be," I hear some one in London saying, "to live in a dirty house."

Oh, I am a curious fellow.

"He'm be mazed like a oddmedodd," as the Devon dialect would render it. "Praper clavver, he'm be, sly sly!"

I am mazed, and the London fellow is sane. He likes sulphurous soot, I like the air of the sea. He likes dirty cow milk or chemical whiskey; I milk my own goats and drink my own berry wine. He likes a fumous atmosphere of music halls; I prefer to watch the stars, especially that Winter giant below Orion, Sirius the Dogstar, shaking with crimson fire, then flashing a ray of blue. Perhaps he is an artist and loves to paint lily-pale women, classic beauties; let him paint them, and leave me my dear birds and animals, yea, even the merry rats who gallop in the yard-thick cob wall all night, the black-eyed graceful mice, the beetles who creep from their cracks in the dark, the moths, the spiders, even an occasional flea.

Mad? Perhaps, but if this article finds its way into print, it is to tell you that my cottage is one of the happiest and merriest spots in all England.

Europe Takes to U. S. Bathtubs

By JOHN GOLDSTROM,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Europe is turning from Red Sundays and Black Fridays to White Saturday nights. She has doubled her importation of American bathtubs and accessories since before the war.

Despite that foreign trade generally has fallen off greatly, the United States exported $1,527,000 worth of bathtubs and fixtures last year, according to R. A. Lundquist, chief of the specialties division of the Department of Commerce.

And bruckc to the value of $1,105,000 were sent to Europe last year, as compared with $457,917. Europe is shining up, too, with unprecedented vigor, for $1,325,000 worth of blacking, shoe paste and polish were brought over, as against $687,711 worth the year before she went to war.

Evidently she lost a lot of buttons in what Sergeant York so aptly terms "that turr'ble dispute." She imported $1,023,000 worth, compared with $776,744 worth in 1913.

Burglary evidently has been flourishing, for $2,196,000 worth of locks were imported; in 1913 Europe spent only $1,588,365 with us for locks.

Our sports-loving Yanks left their mark, for $1,262,000 worth of athletic and sporting goods were bought from the United States as compared with $755,419 in the year before the big game began.

Despite her troubles Europe is in a more playful mood, for she bought $2,023,000 worth of toys last year as compared with $813,364 the year before the war.

ECONOMY

Two friends were discussing the wedding of a lady acquaintance.

"I was invited to her wedding," commented one, "but I shan't go!" "Well," said the other; "do you think you can afford to have your absence noticed?" "Yes—better than I can afford to have my presents noticed!"

SMILES OF GIRLS AID LONELY HEARTS

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

IT was raining, and it was dark, and there was a mean little twist in the air, as if the wind didn't like you and wanted to give you a pinch as well as a push.

And it was muddy, and you slipped when you walked, and the woman was alone in a great city, and she didn't get any letters from home, and nobody telegraphed, and everybody was interested in something else, and she wanted to go off in a corner somewhere and have a good old-fashioned cry.

And she went downstairs into the stenographer's office, and started to dictate some business letters. Oh, yes she was a business woman, of a kind, and even business women get tired and discouraged and lonesome—sometimes.

She Laughed

The stenographer had on a black dress, very simple, but very pretty, and there was a scarlet ribbon at the neck of it.

And the stenographer had shiny black hair and bright black eyes, and shiny white teeth, and she looked pretty when she laughed.

And she laughed, when the business woman came in—oh, not at anything in particular, just to be agreeable! And, somehow, things began to seem a little better, and the big lonesome crowded dreary hotel became something almost human.

And after the letters were done the business woman went upstairs and got her key from the little desk in the hall on her own particular floor.

The girl at the desk in the hall had brown hair with a kink in it, and she had blue eyes with a twinkle in them, and she had a smile with a hint of dimples about it.

And when the business woman got her key, and saw the krinkles and the dimples and the smile, she thought:

"Oh, well, it isn't so very far from home after all, not with all these nice girls around!"

And so she went and bought a bunch of violets and put them in an ugly little glass in her room, and she bought a little box of candy, and the latest novel, and she put on her blue housedress and blue slippers, and let down her hair, and had a perfectly good evening, after all.

All because) two other business women were sweet and smiling.

What a long way a smile does go in this world—what a long, long way! It brings the sun out in the dreariest day, and lightens the heaviest load.

I'll warrant there's many a poor old bored-to-death traveling man who pretends to write a letter when he doesn't really have to, just to get a smile to warm his heart.

Some Are Fools

Oh, of course, some of them are fools, and ill-bred, coarse minded fools at that.

The girls in the big hotels all know them—they can tell at a glance—but the nice human folksy fellows, who are just lonesome for home and for the children, and for the face they love—what a lot of comfort they must get just out of looking at the girls who write the letters, and the girls who take the keys in the great hotels all over the country!

Here's looking at you, girls.

Good luck to you, and plenty of it, and sometime when you're all rich and very grand, and ride in your own limousines, and have your own secretary to make out your visiting list and things, be sure that somewhere there's someone who remembers you, and thinks of you with friendly gratitude.

ARE YOU A "GOOD FELLOW" AT HOME?

Do you carry your good fellowship home with you or do you leave it with your bunch of cronies?

Do you spend a dollar freely with your friends, even more than that, gladly—but when it comes to a like amount for your wife you grumble and object?

Why should you desire to be considered a good fellow with the bunch and have so little desire to be a good fellow to your wife?

How can you expect your wife is going to keep on scrubbing and washing and ironing and doing other work in your home if you foolishly refuse to spend every week as much as it would cost her to have help?

Such a realization is not going to set well with her, you may be sure, and there will come a time when she will rebel—and she has a perfect right to resent it.

Most men who are close and stingy about their homes are free with their money outside where it brings them personal pleasure, and when the fellows slap them on the back and make a few complimentary remarks.

Most men spend too much on themselves.

It is likely you do, and if your wife did as much foolishly, you would raise a rumpus about it. Isn't this true?

NO LIMIT TO SPEED FOR SPIRITUAL AIRPLANE

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

WHEN, in anger, some one requests you to descend to the nether regions of eternal flames, he probably expects you to make a round trip; even though he does not wait for a report of your journey such as Dante has given.

If he did, you might tell him in the words of Omar: "I myself am Heaven and Hell."

One hesitates to interfere with hell's monopoly of spiritual police who, with fire and fierce tortures, are supposed to administer immortal pains to mortals guilty of wrong belief or unrepentant sinfulness.

Also, one does not wish to question the exclusive right to a heaven of everlasting bliss for those whose faith and life were equally correct, during their moment of mundane being, in a soul's eternal existence.

But, certainly, it comes close to average personal experience on this particular plane—whatever may still prove true of the unknown future in that bourn from which no traveller returns—that we ourselves are heaven and hell.

Sufficient Examples

That is to say, life surely affords us sufficient samples of heavenly bliss and of hellish torment to make the infinite prolongation of the one or the other a matter of more than speculative interest.

Have you ever read Milton's "Paradise Lost"? Or is that too much to expect of this jazz-time age and civilization? Anyhow, you have a bowing acquaintance with that great name.

In the second book of his poetic drama, that physically blind but spiritually keen-visioned Puritan presents the fallen angels, in their new and dread abode, consulting over the renewal of their conflict with God, for the conquest of the ethereal realms.

And Moloch, the strongest and the fiercest spirit that fought in heaven, declares for open war. He tells the fallen hosts not to regard the way too difficult or the ascent too steep to scale. His sums his plea with words which, to our aspiring souls at least, sound like a summons to rising man rather than a blast of defiance to rouse the fallen angels to regain their place:

"In our proper motion we ascend up to our native seat: descent and fall to us is adversa."

By curious association of ideas, the writer is reminded of another college friend, the Latin poet, Virgil, and his contrary assertion, made under circumstances which we need not here detail, that the descent to Avernus (the classic Latin land of the shadowy hosts) is easy!

It should be said of Milton, that he was not moralizing to us through that speech of Moloch; and of Virgil that his Avernus is not the equivalent of the Christian hell, and that he, too, was speaking literally.

We, in quoting them, choose deliberately to moralize, in the name of practical psychology, when we assert: that each of us not only makes his own heaven and hell, but that, in this process, whatever we may be help to facilitate our efforts.

In other words, if you choose to be good and to do good, the way is open, really straight, and narrow and stony; but it is broad and smooth, and winds through boundless beauty, offering endless opportunity.

On the other hand, if you prefer the sinful road, you will find it a splendid avenue, and bordered most attractively with continuous lure.

House of Regret

It is not just to our human nature to be too pessimistic about its tendencies. We tend upward at least as strongly as downward. Indeed, most of us find it easier to do right than wrong.

Dante allegorizes the progress of humanity as mounting from Hell through Purgatory to Paradise. And Milton's Paradise Lost has for spiritual climax the Paradise Regained.

Any of us knows, from his own experiences, that pride and stupidity and a taint of viciousness may lead to sin; but even a touch of remorse reclaims and raises the fallen angel within us.

When the nations want to take an upward step, we always find a way to take it.

When the nations want to disarm, then, even by the practical means of lessening the burden of taxation for armament, they step forward on the ideal path of Peace.

If you wish strongly enough to transform the hells about you into benefits, there is never any difficulty in finding ways and means of effective transformation.

If you really desire to surround yourself with heavenly beauty, it is heartening to find it so easy to release the imprisoned splendor that indwells us.

And there is no speed limit for your spiritual airplane!
